AFTER FUN IS OVER, PLAN TO NOMINATE TAFT ON 1ST BALLOT

CHICAGO, June 22.—Colonel Roosevelt has notified the management of the Congress Hotel that he will give up his rooms, both personal and headquarters, tonight. He expects to leave with Mrs. Roosevelt and Kermit for Oyster Bay on a Pennsylvania train which leaves about midnight. An automobile, which was ordered for Colonel Roosevelt and his wife, arrived at the hotel at 11:40 a. m. and was held in readiness.

CHICAGO, June 22.—That James Schoolcraft Sherman would be given the Vice-Presidential nomination with President Taft was the general belief about the convention today.

COLISEUM, Chicago, June 22.—The Republican National Convention, called to meet at 10 o'clock, drifted aimlessly for three-quarters of an hour. The report of the Committee on Credentials, the first thing to come before the delegates, was not ready. It was 10:45 when the convention was finally brought to order.

Rev. John Wesley Hill pronounced the invocation.

"TOOT," AND THE STEAM ROLLER STARTS.

Two minutes after the convention started the "steam roller" was on its way. The Taft delegates seemed to realize the situation.

They were confident of the President's renomination on the first ballot and were in most considerate mood.

Although most of the Taft leaders have agreed on renaming Sherman for Vice-President, others are known to have handled the vice-presidential bait before Governor Hadley. The Governor is expected to decline the offer.

Senator William E. Borah, the Idaho progressive, has been sounded by emissaries of the President and given answer that leaves him out of the consideration.

The first case that came up was that of the delegates at large from Mississippi. Two reports were offered. When the motion of Delegate Watson to table the minority report came up, someone in the audience called "Toot," others imitated the sound of escaping steam. When the votes were put the delegates shouted "Yes." Then they shouted "No." The "no" was loud and long.

"The eyes appear to have it," shouted the chairman smilingly.

"The ayes have it, and the motion is passed."

Some delegates produced a metal whistle and sounded two shrill blasts.

The other Mississippi cases, in which there were no contests, were rushed through in the same manner, the chairman announcing his decision amid deafening choruses of "Noes."

Roller is "Too Speedy."

Everyone was good natured.

Chairman Root advanced to the front of the platform to ask for order when the contests in the State at large case of Washington were called. In a pleasant little speech he asked a little more quiet.

"Mr. Chairman: A point of order," shouted P. W. Howard, of Mississippi.

"State the point."

"The steam roller is exceeding the speed limit."

"The point is obtained," smiled Root. "However, we must hasten somewhat for we have hopes of getting home for Sunday."

The reading clerk then began reading the majority report in the Washington case.

John J. Sullivan of Ohio presented the statement of the minority, and "in behalf of all Roosevelt members of the committee on credentials moved the adoption of the statement" as a substitute.

The statement charged that the contests in Washington were "all trumped up ones" and found for the seating of all the Roosevelt delegates.

"Nearer My God, To Thee."

Watson, of Indiana, moved to table the minority motion, and to let the steam roller list go through.

"Choo, choo, choo" began the delegates from the Roosevelt side.

They started to make a loud and lively imitation of a road roller in full operation. As the music escaping steam came hissing over the heads of the delegates the cries were heard:

"All aboard the choo-choo car."

"Stand your tracks."

And then, turning the situation into farce, they laughed and hooted

PROTEST AGAINST BRYAN'S ATTACK

Democratic candidates for President, headed by Speaker Champ Clark, today took a kick apiece at the hat thrown into the ring by William J. Bryan, by his telegrams from Chicago, protesting the choice of Alton B. Parker as temporary chairman.

Mr. Bryan's cry was, "No reactionary will do." The candidates, Speaker Clark, Governor Wilson, Governor Foss, Governor Baldwin, Mayor Gaynor and Governor Marshall replied that the issues of the campaign should form the only "bone of contention," at Baltimore.

Clark for Harmony.

Speaker Clark telegraphed Bryan that if all joined in an appeal to the Democratic National Committee to avoid controversies in organization of the Baltimore convention, the committee would leave the platform and the nomination of candidates the only real issues on which delegates need divide.

Speaker Clark's telegram follows:

Have consulted with committee having my interests in charge and agree with them that the supreme consideration should be to prevent any discord in the convention.

Friends of mine on the Sub-committee of Arrangements have already presented the name of Ollie James to the subcommittee.

I believe that if all join in the interests of harmony in an appeal to the entire National Committee to avoid controversies in matters of organization, the committee will so arrange as to leave the platform and nomina-

MRS. SCHLEY TO GET A PENSION OF $50

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The House today granted the widow of Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley a pension of $50 a month. This is $100 less than was allowed by the Senate. The House maintained that no extraordinary need warranted this increase to Mrs. Schley.

INQUIRY ASKED BY "L" UNION

Mayor Fitzgerald's attempt to have the directors of the Boston Elevated Railway Company consider the demands of the strikers resulted today in a "stand pat" statement by the company, with a promise that the directors may meet next week and take up the strike problem.

The statement of the Elevated is as follows:

The Mayor submitted to the president certain suggestions which he requested the president to place before the board of directors. This, of course, the president agreed to do, stating at the time that he not only had no authority to accept for action any such suggestions, but on the contrary was authorized very positively not to make any change in the attitude of the company.

The president explained to the Mayor that it was extremely unlikely that a meeting of the directors could be held on such short notice, and that in all likelihood the matter would come before the board during the coming week.

The president stated to the Mayor that the attitude of the company had been directed and approved by the board of directors which had held frequent meetings and that there was no reason to suppose that they would see their way clear to change their position, which had been frankly stated to the public.

Petition State Board.

An official request for the investigation of the street car men's strike by the State Board of Arbitration was made by the men's union today.

The request is signed by the president, secretary and executive committee of the strikers' union. It further states in detail the men's grievances, and charges the Elevated management with the discharge of some 200 men, for no other cause than adding membership in the organization.

Under the law, this compels the State Board to determine by a thorough investigation who is responsible for the present strike, and to fix the blame for its inception and continuance.

The Elevated statement came as the result of a conference of Mayor Fitzgerald with President William A. Bancroft yesterday. The Mayor outlined the demands of the strikers. They asked that all be reinstated with the same rights as before, and that in the event of the company's refusal, that the matter be submitted to arbitration.

Officials Confer.

It was expected the directors would meet today and consider the proposal. Strikers called at the Mayor's office to await word from the Elevated.

A conference was held by President Bancroft and several directors who dropped in, but there was no formal meeting. Afterward the statement was issued.

Mayor Fitzgerald talked to President Bancroft on the telephone, and the head of the road announced it had been impossible to arrange for a meeting of the directors in such short notice and at the week end. He said he saw no reason why the road should change its policy, but that the directors might meet Monday or Tuesday.

The committee of the men consisted of James T. Moriarty, vice-president of the Central Labor Union; Fred Fay, and T. J. Sheehan of the street car men's union; Thomas Raine, William Murray and Dennis Shea of the strikers' committee.

Mayor Fitzgerald consented to serve on a committee of citizens to try to bring

CAMBRIDGE MAN STARTS THIRD PARTY PETITION

CHICAGO, June 22.—A petition was put in circulation today by H. B. McDowell of Cambridge, Mass it read:

We, the undersigned, denouncing the fraud perpetrated by the National Convention, so-called, of the Republican party, dedicate ourselves to the progressive principles advocated and maintained by Theodore Roosevelt, the next President of the United States.

The petition is intended to sound the sentiment of Republican voters and be circulated throughout the United States.

Umpires—Brennan and Emslie.
Attendance—6,500.

SOUTH END PARK, June 22.—Kling's pall-benders were prepared to make a game fight for at least part of the doubleheader bill with the Giants this afternoon, and Kling expected that his men could win if they were given an even break by the umpires. The Pilgrims gave the Giants a good tussle yesterday, but had no chance with the arbitration against them.

FIRST GAME.

Giants—Snodgrass bounded a single over Devlin. Doyle scratched a hit o Sweeney. Merkle flied to Kirk near the right field fence, both runners advancing. Murray fanned. Becker got a scat home run, the ball striking the top of the right field fence and bounding in. It was good for three bases, and scored Snodgrass and Doyle. Shafer flied to Kirke. TOW RUNS.

Pilgrims—Devlin led off with a single between Shafer and Fletcher. Campbell popped to Merkle. Sweeney shot a single to right, Kirke struck out, Jackson singled past Fletcher, scoring Devlin and sending Sweeney to third. Houser struck out. ONE RUN.

SPENCER MUST DIE, RULES SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court today overruled the exceptions of Bertram G. Spencer, convicted of the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, the Springfield school teacher, on March 31, 1910.

This means Spencer must die in the electric chair unless the Governor and Council extend clemency.

Spencer took exceptions on the ground the jury had not weighed the evidence of alienists in his case. He also claimed he had been illegally returned to the jail from the insane asylum, without the ruling of the asylum trustees, who, he asserted were compelled by law to rule as to his sanity.

HELD IN $2,000 BAIL FOR FATAL QUARREL

SALEM, June 22.—In the District Court today Michael Ekonomou, charged with manslaughter for the death of Wrisienty Wazneska, was held in $2,000. The men worked in a Peabody factory. On Monday they had a quarrel. It is said that Wazneska started to take off his shoe to hit Ekonomou. Before he could do so Ekonomou struck him behind the ear, knocking him down. He became unconscious that night, and died on Wednesday night. An autopsy held yesterday showed that death had been caused by blow on the head.

IMPROVISED NET SAVES BOY ON POLE

LOWELL, June 22.—When playing follow my leader today Elmer Goyette, twelve years old, of No. 20 Joliet avenue, this city, climbed to the top of a twenty-foot telegraph pole and seized a live wire. John Ducharme, a furniture mover, who was passing in his wagon, attempted to climb the pole, ailing, Ducharme made a life net out of burlap. Volunteers held the net and Goyette dropped into it. He was taken to a hospital, suffering from severe burns, but will live.

$40,000 BLAZE IN LOWELL BAKERY

LOWELL, June 22.—The large modern bakery of Friend Brothers was destroyed by fire today, causing a loss of $40,000.

The building was constructed of concrete and cement throughout. It had been considered fireproof. The fire started near the ovens and within a few minutes the entire plant was in flames. The walls fell in and several firemen were injured.

Two alarms were rung and all the apparatus in the city was called out, as the bakery was at Westford and Chelmsford streets and other buildings were threatened.

DORCHESTER GIRL RUN DOWN BY AUTO

While on an errand for her mother, eight-year-old Margaret Fahey, of No. 12 Tebroc street, Dorchester, was knocked down by an automobile on Bowdoin street, near Topliff street, Dorchester. At the City Hospital it was said the child was seriously injured. The auto was owned and driven by William Barnett of No. 12 Wilmington street, Dorchester. Barnett hurried the girl to a doctor's office.

DENMARK TO TAKE PART IN BIG FAIR

COPENHAGEN, May 22.—The Panama Pacific Exposition commissioners who are touring Europe in the interest of the 1915 world's fair at San Francisco, left here today for The Hague, after securing the promise of the Danish government to send representatives. The commissioners were received by King Christian.

BOSTON WOMAN KILLED IN AUTO

BACO, Me., June 22.—One Boston woman is dead, another is at the Trull Hospital in Biddeford seriously injured, and one man was probably fatally hurt as a result of two automobile accidents on the Portland road here today. Two other men were slightly injured.

The dead:

Mrs. Carl M. T. Hill of Roxbury.

The injured:

Mrs. W. L. Straus of Cambridge, fractured arm and injuries to body.

George S. Ayers, seventy-seven years old, of Saco, expected to die.

George W. Ayres of Saco, slightly injured.

Ernest L. Ayers of Saco, slightly hurt.

Mrs. Hill, who died at the Trull Hospital at noon; Mrs. Straus, and the latter's husband, W. L. Straus of Cambridge, were in the Straus Auto traveling from Portland when the machine ran into a telegraph pole and a tree on a curve near the Limerick bridge. The three persons were thrown heading from the auto. Mrs. Hill sustaining a fractured skull. Straus escaped injury.

Passing autos picked up the injured women and rushed them to the hospital. Mrs. Straus will recover. Mr. Straus told the Saco police that his steering gear refused to work when he tried to round the curve, and before he could stop the machine had gotten beyond his control. The automobile was wrecked.

LINDSEY SAYS THIRD PARTY CONVENTION WILL BE IN DENVER

CHICAGO, June 22.—Speaking as one of the chosen leaders of Colonel Roosevelt's campaign, Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, says:

The people want Theodore Roosevelt, and if this convention does not nominate him he will be the choice of a convention of Progressives to be held at Denver in August, that will probably be called the Progressive Republican party.

There is a sentiment that the time is ripe for a radical change. The people demand it, as is witnessed by the overwhelming majority Roosevelt secured where Presidential preferential primaries were held this Spring. The sentiment of this gathering points to it, and if you ask nine out of ten men they will say: "Give us Teddy!"

PLAN TO NOMINATE TAFT ON THE FIRST BALLOT

ed, only to drop into the chorus "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The loud Californian statesmen started the hymn just as they had started the booing, and musical voices from the plantation State of Mississippi made the great old hymn resound.

The tune changed. Militant leaders swung into "Marching Through Georgia."

Chairman Root stopped the singing for Hugh T. Halbert of Minnesota to speak for the minority report.

Mr. Halbert said: "Before presenting a statement of the case of Washington, I am requested to make a statement. The minority members of the committee on credentials believed that the committee was a court of final jurisdiction and they did not present objections to many of the contests.

Argues Washington Case

"There were contests in eleven counties. With the determination of a single contest from a single county in Washington for Roosevelt he would have had a majority. A primary election was held and it resulted in 8,000 votes being cast.

"Of those five hundred were cast for Taft and 6,491 for Theodore Roosevelt. (Cheers).

"It has seemed to the minority that this question is one of right and wrong. That it is a great moral question. The Republican party can stand defeat with honor, but the Republican party cannot stand defeat with dishonor."

"They are rolling the roller," the delegates said in happy chorus, and William T. Dowell of Washington took the stand.

"I understand," interjected ex-Governor Fort of New Jersey, "that this delegate is one of the contested delegates. Has he any right either to vote or to speak?"

"Has No Right to Vote."

"The gentleman is one of those whose seats are contested," ruled the chairman, "and he has no right to vote, but I don't think that it precludes his right to speak."

Mr. Dowell said that the Roosevelt people had disregarded the party call and gone together without authority. They had no right, he said, to come before the convention and ask that their delegates be seated because they had thrown party law to the winds. He read from the minutes of the state convention of Washington to estimate the party call.

He stated that in the State primaries the Judges were selected by one man and the officers were elected by one man. The same primary chose the Roosevelt delegates, he said, and added:

"And let me tell you gentlemen, when those delegates elected at that unlawful primary arrived at the Democratic State convention they were not allowed to sit," rambled all around," sang the delerambled all around," said the delegates as the vote was called.

Engineer Root pulled the throttle of the steam roller, she drilled ahead one length and Washington had been added to the Taft list.

Alice Longworth to the Fore.

At 11:50 a Roosevelt demonstration started, the cheering being led by a man in the Indiana delegation. The California delegates rose to their feet yelling: "We want Teddy, we want Teddy."

Alice Roosevelt Longworth rose in her place in the gallery and waved her hat as the demonstration started. At the end of the first minute the applause was deafening.

Mississippi was quickly settled and Taft delegates seated in the fourth North Carolina, the third Oklahoma and the second Tennessee districts.

The report of the committee on the first district of Washington seating the Taft delegates through in three minutes behind the delegates at large.

Three hundred La Follette supporters marched to the Coliseum carrying banners and signs for the Wisconsin Senator.

Victor Rosewater walked by the Texas delegation. They grabbed him about the neck and pulled him among them for a friendly and noisy demonstration. It preceded the Roosevelt demonstration.

"We want Teddy," began a chorus that changed at once to "We've got Teddy." New Jersey started the demonstration. Standing on their chairs, they began waving flags and chanting the battle cry of the third party.

Massachusetts Joins In.

Instantly California popped to the front to join the noise. Massachusetts chipped in with "Roosevelt 18, Roosevelt 18." And then the answering calls of West Virginia and Pennsylvania came in to swell the general chorus that had been in progress three minutes. A signal came from the stand for the band to play.

The little the whistle again resounded its tantalizing and outrageously provoking wheeze.

Indiana got up to join the fun, and it was the apparent purpose of the Roosevelt folk to make the scene one of farce comedy.

West Virginia delegates climbed into their chairs and began singing, "We Want Teddy."

Miss Flo Jacobson was again singing in the band stand.

When her clear notes came floating over the great crowd, the tumult ceased, and the men on the floor and the women in the gallery were silent while "Moonlight Bay" soothed the ruffled delegates. When she ceased singing, a swinging, zipping round of applause forced an encore.

Every delegate in the house stood and kept the peace in tribute to the dual power of woman and of song.

ORGANIZATION OF THE NEW ROOSEVELT PARTY RUSHED

CHICAGO, June 22.—Active steps toward the formation of a progressive party, with Theodore Roosevelt as its standard bearer, were taken today. Colonel Roosevelt went into conference shortly after 9 o'clock with representatives of nearly all the states and upon the result of that conference will depend the program that will be immediately formed with reference to the organization of a convention, for which a convention is proposed to be held during the first week in August in Denver.

There is much difference of opinion among his followers as to the character of the movement. Many of the most earnest Roosevelt workers insist that the new party should be formed merely to meet emergency situations and that it is not wise to attempt to be other than a corrective force.

It is assured that a hasty meeting of the new party men will be held in Chicago before the delegates and politicians leave for their homes. The present plan is to hold this meeting at Orchestra Hall, or in the Roosevelt headquarters some time tonight. This detail was to be settled at the conference in the Colonel's room. The persons present at this conference represented everything progressive, from the Roosevelt steering committee for the six New England States to the ultra radical representatives of the Pacific coast delegations.

"Hat in Ring for Good."

They are assured by the statement made by Colonel Roosevelt to a large gathering that besieged his window at an early hour. When he poked his head out of the window he said:

"My friends, my hat is in the ring and it will be in the ring for good and forever."

This utterance was today used as the battle cry for the new party men. The insistent without dissent that the chief essential of getting together was to have the Colonel make a race for President. Among the regular Republican politicians unusual concern was attached to the part the Eastern representatives are to play in the new movement. From the Massachusetts delegations four of the delegates at large and one district delegate will stick with the new party.

These are led by Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard, the leader of the New England faction.

Besides himself George W. Coleman, James P. Magenis and Alvin G. Weeks from the list of delegates at large for Massachusetts are going to the Roosevelt camp. Dr. Frederick P. Glazier of Hudson, Mass., a district delegate, is the fifth member of the delegation who takes a place behind the colonel.

The proportion of five out of thirty-six Massachusetts delegates is said to be a fair indication of the relative strength of the party faction in Massachusetts. The other New England states will have more or less of a part in the movement, with the predicted possibility of throwing this iron-bound Republican stronghold into the Democratic column along with the Solid South in the coming election.

"Dynamite Ed" Perry of Oklahoma wants to nominate Roosevelt for the Presidency either tonight or early tomorrow morning immediately after the Taft contingent in the convention adjourns.

"Our delegation of sixteen men," said Perry today, "will remain throughout for Roosevelt. No one else goes. And we'll go back to Oklahoma and carry the State for him."

E. H. Herriff of Apache, Oklahoma, chairman of the delegation, stood by and endorsed Perry in each statement.

Two members of the Oklahoma delegation will go down to Baltimore and there mingle with the Progressive Democrats. They claim to have assurance from Oklahoma Democrats that they will join in a third party movement.

Probably Perry and Herriff will be the two men to go to Baltimore.

The backbone of the movement is, of course, the California and Oklahoma delegations. Texas is to join strength with the two Western states in the list and reports from Missouri, Minnesota, Oregon, Kansas, Nebraska and Washington give assurances to the Colonel of a marked party defection in those states to his movement.

Central West Conservative.

There is at present no strong drift from Illinois, Ohio, Indiana or Kentucky and Iowa. Having large ambitions of their own, they are playing extremely close until the definite program is outlined.

Minnesota's progressive Republicans are for Roosevelt on a third party ticket, according to W. A. Eaton of Duluth. Senator Moses E. Clapp is not talking on the subject. Hugh Halbert of St. Paul is with the Rough Rider. "We've had but one complaint," said Mr. Eaton, "the third party movement was not started soon enough to suit us. We've wanted Roosevelt on a progressive platform as the progressive candidate from the beginning. While I can speak only for myself, I am satisfied that this sentiment is unanimous."

ROW IN CREDENTIALS COMMITTEE; MEMBERS NEAR PERSONAL CLASH

CHICAGO, June 22.—The credentials committee was up and at it early. Though defeated on every contest which they had carried to the committee, the Roosevelt forces renewed their battle when the committee went to work today on the Texas cases.

Chairman Devine addressed the credentials committee and denounced as "gutter work" a statement issued by the Roosevelt members denouncing the Taftites' actions.

He declared the statement, which was given to the morning newspapers, was "as dastardly a piece of falsification as was ever concerted."

Devine declared that any one that asserted that the majority report of the credentials committee had been prepared in advance was a "willful and deliberate liar."

R. R. McCormick of Illinois [illegible] out the statement, rose to reply. Devine surrendered the gavel and [illegible] personal attack on McCormick.

Order was finally restored without bloodshed, but there was another outbreak when Halbert of Minnesota said Devine was not an impartial chairman. Estabrook of New Hampshire asked Halbert if he intended to support Taft if nominated. Halbert cried that he could not tell yet. "He is going to bolt," shouted Estabrook.

ELIHU ROOT, LEADER IN VAUDEVILLE SHOW AT T. R. OBSEQUIES

'L' UNION ASKS STATE INQUIRY

about a settlement. He sent to Police Commissioner O'Meara the following letter of Vice-President Moriarty:

"I hereby make complaint that there is gambling in all the barns of the Boston Elevated Company in Boston and nearby cities and towns. I also make complaint that the Boston police department is furnishing officers and for by the city of Boston to ride on cars in other towns and cities. I would like to have the police enforce all the laws both on citizens and all others in the employ of the Boston Elevated Railway Company."

Statement by Non-Strikers.

A committee representing the Boston Elevated Fraternal Protective Association, the members of which have not joined the strike, issued a statement signed by James J. Comfort, Jeremiah E. O'Brien and Peter J. Waldron. In the statement the committee says:

Under normal conditions the Boston Elevated Railway Company employs about 6,000 men as conductors, motormen, inspectors, starters, etc. The membership of the Fraternal Protective Association comprises, in round numbers, 4,100 employes.

A careful canvass shows only about 900 men went out on strike, or, in other words, deserted their jobs at the command of the unjustified strike promoters. Of that number 300 are not affiliated with the car men's union, but quit work through fear and under pressure of threatening influences. To that 900 may be added about 150 more who were discharged by the company just previous to the strike for various offences, mostly for failure in the performance of their duties.

Therefore, the statements issued by the publicity agents of the strikers, that 4,000 are on strike, is shown to be false and absurd.

Until quite recently, when an Elevated employe had a grievance, he was obliged to act as his own representative and advocate in the presentation of that grievance to the officials of the company. Some of the men did not like to do that, and so it was deemed wise to form the Fraternal and Protective Association.

When this association was well under way the company was notified of its existence. The officials were told of its plans and purposes. The company was informed that on all questions of work and wages and grievances the association would insist upon being represented by a committee.

Not only did the officials of the Elevated agree to recognize this association, but they gave it encouragement, and readily agreed that, in all cases of dispute arising between them and the men, they would be glad to deal directly with a committee from the association.

Under this agreement which exists between the company and the association the officials will deal directly with a committee of sixty-four employes in the consideration of all questions.

"Had No Grievance."

When this strike was ordered we did not feel that we had any just grievance against the company. Our wage scale had just been raised. Our overtime pay had been increased. Our work day schedule had been bettered. Our relations were pleasant. We did not believe that the contract submitted by the promoters of the strike was a fair one. It made many demands upon the company and promised nothing in return but the "influence" of the union. How that "influence" was to be exerted is a matter of considerable doubt.

To show that this union was not desired by Elevated men, it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that organizers were at work among the men for four months before the strike was ordered, and succeeded in influencing less than 15 per cent. of them.

The strikers officially say they demand the right of industrial freedom. That right has not been taken from them, but when we say that we had rather work than loaf, they deny us the right to industrial freedom.

We have been insulted and our families have been abused because we have not thrown up our jobs. In some cases personal violence has been threatened. We have come to the conclusion, however, that we are right and we are not going to be swerved by abuse or threats.

The blame for this trouble is not upon the shoulders of the L officials, nor upon the Mayor, nor upon the "politicians," as the strike leaders declare, but it should be laid at the door of imported professional trouble makers.

"DON'T ASK ME ABOUT POLITICS," SAYS LODGE, 'I WON'T GET IN NOW'

Don't ask me anything about politics. Do you think that after keeping out of this fight four months I am likely to get into it now? I may have something to say when the convention is over and a candidate is nominated, but for the present I intend to keep silent. I have had no inside information on the convention since it started, getting all my information from the newspapers, and the reports are so contradictory and confusing that up to the present time I have been unable to make anything out of them.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, when asked to comment on the Chicago convention at his home in Nahant.

Evelyn Thaw Angry, Refuses to Answer

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 22.—"I don't want to reply. I won't reply. You can't make me repent the events. It is bad enough that Thaw stood behind my skirts in two trials. God knows I have done enough for him."

In a vitriolic voice, with bloodless face and eyes blazing, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw thus refused to repent for the third time portions of her life story.

For five hours she had displayed a cold indifference and mastery of emotions born of former greatness. She answered questions with certainty and promptitude until the cross-examination, Clarence J. Shearn, chief attorney for Thaw, led her to the scene she has chosen to forget.

A startling change then came over the languid young woman in the witness chair —a metamorphosis that recalled the ancient apothegm of Aristotle, that under the stress of emotion men are like lions, and women like leopards. Her eyes narrowed, her hands clenched, and she seemed poised for a spring.

Jordan Counsel Busy On Plea to Foss

Chester Jordan's attorneys, Jeremiah E. Sullivan, Harvey Pratt and Arthur Smith, today began the preparation of the case to present it to Governor Foss in hopes of securing commutation to save their client from the electric chair, in which he is sentenced to die the week beginning Monday, September 22, for the murder of his wife, Honora.

Sidelights on the Great Convention

Incidents That Lighten Proceedings

George Ade Tells of the Fables He Leaves to the Roosevelt Press Agents.

CHICAGO, June 22.—George Ade and Richard Harding Davis met in the grill room of the Blackstone Hotel. "Say, now you're writing fables about the convention?" remarked Davis, addressing Ade.

"No," replied Ade. "I'm leaving those to the Roosevelt press agents."

"Well," complained Davis, "I'm a war correspondent, not a prize fight expert, and therefore can't see why I was sent here to cover this scrap."

"Well," said Finley Peter Dunne (Mr. Dooley) to a mixed group of Roosevelt and Taft men, the centre of whom was Governor Bass of New Hampshire, at the Chicago Club, "We Democrats have not lived in vain these forty years, when we can go up to the Coliseum on a free ticket and see you Republicans guarded by 300 uniformed policemen, armed with clubs and guns, ready to jump into the fray if you get too gay with one another.

"You used to have the laugh on the Democrats, but it looks to me as if the laugh was on you this time. Shades of Lincoln, Grant, Harrison and McKinley, what are we coming to?"

Former Senator "Late" Young of Iowa, who quit being a "standpatter" to join the Cummins boom for President, was talking about Roosevelt.

"The colonel ought to take a post graduate course in adversity," he said.

"In fact, I think he is taking one, or rather having one administered to him.

"The colonel is brave but crafty. He is one of the smartest men in America. But every smart man meets with setbacks. Why, when I was a Senator—say do you think Cummins has got a chance?"

Garry Herrmann, the baseball magnate, headed the 375 members of the Blaine Republican Club of Cincinnati that came to Chicago last Monday. There are still seventy-five "marchers" in Chicago. The rest went home Thursday. Before his departure Garry explained:

"A lot of our pitchers on both teams. Both candidates have been at the bat several times and neither has been struck out. Both have received ragged support. The members of their teams have been batting fouls all over the lot. If the game continues much longer they will have to call it on account of darkness."

President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California and Mrs. Wheeler are attending the convention. A California delegate, who saw Dr. Wheeler enter the lobby of the Blackstone, asked his alternate: "If you had a baby, what would you do with it?"

"Why Benjamin Ide Wheeler," replied the alternate, who comes from a section of the Golden Gate State where the daffydill is ancient.

Willie Griffin, fourteen years old, who says he is the youngest magazine editor in the world, and the National Roosevelt Committee that he was ready to take the stump for Ide Colonel. The committee permitted him to make an impromptu address to a crowd that packed the headquarters. Griffin did not lose his nerve.

"My friends," he said, "we must elect Theodore Roosevelt President. If we do not elect him you will see the worst revolution that this country has ever known."

served and causing nervous spasm through a large part of the sessions. "Dry" smokes are the resource of "Boss" Flinn, Governor Johnson, Colonel Sew, "Big" Steve" Stevenson and others. Flinn uses the same cigar during an entire session, carefully tucking it in his pocket during outbursts against the steam roller.

Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Massachusetts followed the example of the two women delegates from California and brought a lunch with him to the convention.

"Got to have something to keep steam in the boiler," he said. "Lots of yes terday's forcefly was due to hunger as much as political differences."

The high cost of living in Chicago during convention week has made itself felt with delegates to the Republican National Convention. Collections and subscriptions were started by the members of the National Committee and individuals to defray expenses of those delegates on whose purses the extended session was telling. It is the first time in many years, members of the committee said, that this situation had intruded on a National Convention.

Some of the delegates, it was learned, had planned to leave for home today, their funds having become so far depleted they were unable to remain longer. Less than a dozen already have surrendered their seats in the convention to their alternates, and to prevent a general depopulation of the voting delegates' seats, those in better financial circumstances began the collection of a "side-over" fund.

Senator Brady was taking the addresses of friends in order to send them a bottle of the liquid which has made Kentucky famous. Senator Du Pont of Delaware gave the number of his room. Before to get the initials "H. A." on Senator DuPont. "There is another Du Pont at the same hotel and I do not want him to get it." The other is T. Coleman Du Pont, who is on the opposite side of the political question which has divided the Republican party and families at this convention.

Mrs. Florence Porter of Los Angeles and Mrs. Isabella W. Blaney of San Francisco, delegates to the Republican convention, will be guests of honor at a luncheon Monday at the Hamilton Club. Among the guests will be Senator William A. Smith of Michigan and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

"Oh, you daddy, you dear old thing. I've watched the convention every day for you" (smack, smack, hug, hug) business of deep emotion) a sweet slip of a girl with china blue eyes and baby face, held Samuel Baum, a convention visitor from Waterloo, Ia., in most embarrassing embrace.

"Young lady, you have made a mistake," said Baum, prying himself loose.

"Oh, I am so sorry, you are the image of my dear, dear daddy," said the impulsive young thing, as she hastened away to hide her confusion. Ten minutes later Baum discovered that his wallet, containing $100, had also disappeared.

"We are not bolters," said Chairman Cruzen of the Idaho delegation, "but Republicans, and for us not to answer to our names when the roll is called would be simply bolting. I gave Colonel Roosevelt to understand that Idaho's delegates were thorough Republicans and would not follow any third party or candidate.

"This is the end of Roosevelt, politically, if he proposes to take up with the Heneys, Johnsons and the Forts. I have been disgusted with much of the anarchistic talk I have heard in many of the Roosevelt caucuses; it is unpatriotic and un-American."

Although Roosevelt is fully aware that he cannot get the Coliseum nomination, he is taking things coolly and laying his plans for the future. "Rose" Barnes who is always a favorite subject with him and he never sewns to tire of describing the latter's characteristics and the way in which he works in politics.

The Albany boss reciprocates and likes to "roast" the Colonel. He has not allowed a single opportunity to slip by to do so since he bundled here to aid in the defeat of the man who took the Saratoga convention out of his hands, two years ago.

On Roosevelt's return from a ride he was met by a big crowd outside his headquarters. He literally rode through the crowd and brought a lunch with him to the convention.

"Smile, Teddy, smile," shouted a little woman. The Colonel grinned and the crowd hurrahed. "Stick to it, Teddy," yelled a man who tried to break through the police lines. "You bet I will," shouted back the Colonel, waving his hand at him.

WHY HAMILTON QUITS TUFTS

The real reason back of the resignation of President Frederick W. Hamilton of Tufts College is because the trustees want a solicitor of funds for a president rather than an educator and an administrator, according to an interview today from Dr. Hamilton.

Dr. Hamilton was asked if it were true, as reported, that the trustees want "a beggar" and not an educator for president.

"That is to a certain extent true," said Dr. Hamilton. "I have not raised any very large amounts of money for the college.

A few minutes later he said:

"I suppose, more than anything else, the situation is that I have always conceived my position to be that of an educator or an administrator, while the trustees want a solicitor of funds.

Dr. Hamilton Objects.

"I am not aware that any serious criticism has ever been made. The fundamental difference between the board of trustees and myself, as I have stated, is the fact that the board conceived my duties to be that of a solicitor of funds to which I took exception.

"In addition to this, there are minor differences concerning educational and administrative matters. They concern methods of education and of administration, policies regarding the development of some of our departments and differences of opinion regarding the administration of college funds, as well as the question of raising funds.

"It all simmers down ultimately to the question of the real duties of a college president, whether he is to be an educator or a solicitor."

Disagreed on Money.

It has been a matter of common knowledge at Tufts that the trustees and President Hamilton have disagreed on many questions, particularly on money.

The establishment of Jackson College for women as a separate institution is said to have increased running expenses, with no added funds to meet the increase.

Concerning Dr. Hamilton's successor, many Tufts alumni feel that an executive, more of a business man type than of the academic, will succeed Dr. Hamilton.

Though Dr. Hamilton is giving up the administration of the college he will not resign definitely till New Year. He said:

"It is true that I shall resign from Tufts College. I have arranged with the trustees for a leave of absence till January 1. By that time my resignation will be in their hands for action."

At first Dr. Hamilton merely said that his action was due to differences between himself and the trustees. It was not until the question was put to him squarely and that the point was made that the great body of Tufts alumni would like to know the real situation, that he consented to admit that he was getting out because he didn't think a college president should be "a solicitor," as he puts it.

Asked his vacation plans Dr. Hamilton said:

"I have formed none yet. I am very tired. I am going to get rested. I shall stay right here at home until I do. Then I shall make further plans."

"Who will conduct the college affairs during your leave of absence?"

"I do not know. They'll probably appoint an acting-president."

He said he had no idea who that would be.

Dr. Hamilton was asked if his resignation is a sudden resolve or a gradual determination.

"I have had it under consideration for a year or more. Within a very few days past, when I found the trustees and I could not get together, I made up my mind that my resignation would be the most expedient course for me to pursue.

"There is one thing that I do want stated as showing the extent of the college at this time. In a recently published report of the U. S. Commissioner of Education classifying colleges in the country Tufts was included in the fifty-nine colleges of the first class. I think that tells its own story as to the educational side of my administration."

The watch belonged to his wife and was presented to her by Oscar Hammerstein, the grand opera manager, while she was a public singer.

"HOW WE SAW TEDDY," BY NELLIE BLY AND NELL BRINKLEY

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY AT CHICAGO.

"Nellie Bly wrote a letter to Teddy on a nice, big policeman's manly bosom. And he said he could 'die doin' this!' And the other Nell B. dared em."

"We lay in ambush for Teddy behind a policeman, just as 'Bwana Tumbo' waited at a waterhole for a lion!"

"Horrors! Only a blonde maid—and look at she and me, how little we felt. Teddy could never have 'shrunk' us like this."

"And then—a great dust—a big thrill—out of the dust a grim, fine face that looked good to me—an upraised hand in salute and"——

"And us, when the dust had settled—and we got out from between the Westerner and the policeman—wafers!"

FAMOUS WRITER TELLS HOW TEDDY, THE ONLY, WAS TRACKED TO HIS LAIR

COLISEUM, Chicago, June 22.—Nellie Bly saw the convention today. She has written about it for the AMERICAN. Here is what she says, told in her own way:

By NELLIE BLY.

I wanted to see Teddy.

Everybody did. I found that out when I arrived at the hotel. There was a jam at the entrance, and the only way to get anywhere was to plunge into the crowd, do it and go with it. We got into it, Nell Brinkley and I. We pushed and were pushed through corridors, up stairways, through halls decorated with these appealing notices:

This Way to the Taft Headquarters.

Nobody went the way of the card; everybody was searching for other cards and for another person. Some were saying, "Where is Teddy?" Others said "President Roosevelt," and others said "Colonel," but it did not matter what name they used, they all wanted to see the same person. We kept pushing, and finally found ourselves being shoved through a big hall, where some man was telling the passing show a lot of things that no one stopped to hear.

A man at the door we entered and another at the door we left were handing out badges for T. R. One badge was "Then shall not steal" and the other a bat in the ring. Pushing down a long corridor we came to the end before a door marked "1102." At that door stood an amiable looking man with black, square-cut whiskers, black eyes, with a small pencil-sized wand in his hand, with which he directed the crowd if they attempted to stop, to move on down the hallway. I stopped; so did Nell Brinkley. The obedient crowd kept moving on. I looked at the man and smiled; he smiled back again. He was the sort you dared smile at. He looked reliable and steady.

Teddy, of Course.

"Is he in there?" I asked him.

"Who?" he asked.

"Teddy, of course," I replied.

"He is," he answered.

"We'll stay," I said to Nell Brinkley, and we squeezed into the corner beside the man who stood at door No. 1102.

"We want to see Mr. Roosevelt," I told him.

"No one sees him," he said, "except his managers. He is working twenty-four hours out of the twenty-four."

"But we came all the way from New York just to get a glimpse of him," I said. "Just you would let me come in and go back again without that glimpse."

A man with friendly eyes, white teeth and a Panama hat stepped up back of us.

"If everybody says Mr. Roosevelt who wants to see him he could not have time for anything else. I am a friend of his and I can see him when I wish, but I don't, because I know every time I see him I am using up his strength and his time, which he could devote to more important affairs; so I am waiting."

We appreciated his generosity, but we looked at each other and shook our heads. We were not anxious to emulate him. It is very interesting to hear about martyrs, but it must be a bore to be one.

Others knew that door. Occasionally a man dropped out of the procession, which was continually being hurried down the other hall, to knock on the door, but the door remained closed. Then again a man would dart out from the line, and my black-whiskered friend would tap a signal upon the door. The door would pass just enough for the newcomer to be slid in, and bang, it was shut again.

"If I knew the magic knock," I said to him, "I might get in."

Suddenly 1102 opened from within. Everybody pushed; a little thrill ran clear to my finger tips, and then—a man came forth! He was big, ruly-headed, good to look at and sure of himself. He dived into the crowd like a single-stroke swimmer, whispered to a few men who pushed forward to meet him, and darted back again into 1102.

Everybody drew a long anxious breath, and the policeman renewed their urgent perpetual motion requests. Still we stood, still we watched 1102.

Another False Alarm.

Again it opened, again everybody pushed and rushed, but a mild-looking man with yellow hair bolted out suddenly and the door closed quickly behind him.

"That is Governor Stubbs," said some one as he was swallowed up in the movement.

The long hours down the hall. Out of that swaying humanity appeared a waiter with a tray. On the tray was a pint bottle of milk, sealed with a paper cap, a tall, straight glass, a saucer with something dark in it and a spoon. As he stopped at 1102 for the magic knock to be given, I said:

"Is that for the colonel, and what is in the saucer?"

He grinned good naturedly. "This is to make an eggnog; and it is for the colonel." And with that the door slid open, slid shut and man and tray disappeared from view.

"That settles it," I said to Nell Brinkley, the big policeman and the man at the door. "If he drinks an eggnog, he will not want any dinner."

But the Westerner with the Panama hat assured us a man may drink two or three eggnog and still have a big appetite. I wasn't convinced.

"I'll write him a letter," I said. Then I turned to the big policeman.

"Will you permit me?" I asked as I held my paper against his broad chest and wrote my letter. This seemed to amuse the crowd. It also amused me. It amused Nell Brinkley, who got busy with her sketch book. Everybody seemed to get a sudden desire to turn their manly chests into writing decks for my benefit, but to all their pleadings I replied, "You will have to wear a uniform first."

I hadn't finished writing when bang, the door opened. The crowd stopped and rushed all in our direction. Again the policemen endeavored to push them back, gently, but decidedly, but, no, they wouldn't. Rather risk a broken head than miss seeing Teddy, and—this time sure; and then out walked a blonde-haired, coiffing, pretty-faced chambermaid with a dustpan in one hand and a waste-paper basket in the other.

Everybody said "Oh!" and "Ah!" sort of weary like, but the chambermaid enjoyed the sensation. She walked deliberately and confidently down the hall in the long way made for her by the policemen. She looked as if she thought the attention was all for her and that, next to Mr. Roosevelt, she was the most important person in Chicago.

"Wouldn't the Democrats like to have that waste paper basket?" I observed, and some man from the crowd, evidently a Democrat, yelled back, "Not half so bad as Taft!"

Everybody laughed and at the same moment the door opened, out rushed four policemen with a man in their midst. It was Teddy, the great and only, the glorious and independent and original Teddy! One glance, and he went down that hall in a flying wedge, part the great mass of people before any of them had realized what had occurred.

One glance at his face and I felt my heart sink. He was pale. He was tired. He looked worried or unhappy, and as he was rushed down the hall, surrounded by policemen, followed by a bodyguard of friends, all in a running trot, it was exactly as if he had been put under arrest and was being rushed off a prisoner.

PASTOR FACING ALIENATION SUIT

The Park and Downs Congregational Church at Norfolk Downs, Wollaston, is split into warring factions over the $25,000 alienation suit brought against the pastor, the Rev. William B. Ayers, by Chester A. Boynton of Revere.

Violent partisans of the pastor have arisen among the congregation, while another party, apparently equally strong, is is inclined to side with Boynton.

The Revere man charges that the pastor has won away the affections of his wife, Helen W. Boynton. The writ in the case has been put in the hands of a deputy sheriff. Mrs. Boynton is an attractive woman, twenty-five years old.

The Rev. Mr. Ayers, when asked about the suit, refused flatly to discuss the matter. Six members of the church, chosen at random, spoke highly of their pastor. One admitted, however, that there is a distinct opposition to Mr. Ayers within the church, and characterized this element as "a group whose efforts to oust the minister resulted in the charges against him which were the subject of a recent investigation."

Some of the minister's friends stated that Boynton has repeatedly made charges against Mr. Ayers, which have in all cases been disapproved.

The suit against the clergyman is not the only trouble that has been his since he came to the church from Cape Vincent, N. Y., two years ago. A committee of Congregational clergymen not long ago finished a protracted consideration of charges made against him. What these charges were, or the result of the investigation, it has been impossible to learn, except that the Rev. George L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Trinitarian Congregational Church of Columbia road, has stated that the minister was not exonerated.

Mrs. Boynton and her husband were formerly very active in the affairs of the Park and Downs Church, and Mr. Boynton, who is financial man in a Boston store, was especially useful to the church in its work of raising money for a new building. This new edifice was dedicated recently.

We have a New Method that Cures Asthma, and we want you to try it at our expense. No matter whether your case is of long standing or recent development, whether it is present as occasional or chronic Asthma—no matter in what climate you live, no matter what your age or occupation, our method is a practically certain cure right in your own home.

We especially want to send it to those apparently hopeless cases, where all forms of inhalers, douches, opium preparations, fumes, "patent smokes," etc., have failed. We want to show everyone at our own expense that this new method will end all difficult breathing, all wheezing, and all loose terrible paroxysms, at once and for all time.

We have now proven conclusively that Asthma is a poison—and leading physicians have been forced to agree with our conclusions. Asthma has been one of the most puzzling and stubborn diseases with which the medical profession has had to deal. The trouble has been that the medical world has directed toward relieving rather than curing.

Almost any one can give you something to ease your immediate suffering, but our treatment is a positive cure and drives the poison out of the system for all time to come. Thoroughly eradicates it.

This is the wonderful part of our method. It leaves you quite only free from the poison, but so strengthens and purifies the entire system that you are able to resist any future attack. You can put your faith in this method and know that you have at last found the relief you so long have sought.

Hay Fever, Bronchitis and all diseases of an Asthmatic Nature quickly yield to this System of Treatment.

WRITE TO-DAY

No matter how many doctors have despaired of your cure, whether your trouble is recent or of long standing or what other remedies you have tried, We want to send a FREE TRIAL OF OUR METHOD to cure Asthma, Bronchitis or Hay Fever sufferer in the land.

We purpose to prove that our method will really and positively cure you for all time.

This means better health, increased physical ability, and longer life. Our free offer is too important to neglect a single day. Write now and begin your cure at once. Send no money. Simply mail coupon below. Do it to-day.

LAURA JACOBS, LYNN CANDIDATE IN PRINCESS RACE

Laura M. Jacobs.

14 MORE DAYS IN PRINCESS RACE

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

Candidates in the American Princess Contest are urged to rush in all votes there's a reason!

In the first place, there are only fourteen days left before the contest ends. As success depends largely upon the enthusiasm of your friends, it is most important that the votes to your credit in the published list on Sunday, June 30, show your position to be among the 200 prize winners. Get as far up on the list as it is possible to get.

Votes are valueless after two weeks from date printed so nothing is gained by holding them back.

Princess candidates should remember that this contest is not a 5 o'clock tea party. It is a race, a hard, swift race and the rewards are going to the strong workers—not to those who run their campaign by fits and starts.

So shirt the coats in! Keep everlastingly at it until the last vote is printed.

The Contest Editor finds it necessary to warn all candidates that they must not send in votes with "special" delivery. Hereafter votes will not be accepted unless the proper amount of postage is prepaid on each package.

Tomorrow's the day. Another page of candidates' photos, another vote list and another five-vote coupon with your Sunday AMERICAN.

Be sure YOU get them all!

"The leader of them all" in last Sunday's vote list was Miss Laura M. Jacobs of Lynn.

Her vote-getting campaign has been steady and consistent. There's a "tip" for candidates in her letter:

233 Boston street, W. Lynn, Mass.
June, 1912.

Princess Editor:

Dear Sir:—

Enclosed you will find my photo and a few clippings. This is my first attempt at any contest and I am greatly pleased with the success I am having. I am receiving votes from all over New England, not only from friends, but from perfect strangers, and I have found the High School pupils to be a big support.

Thanking the American in advance for publishing my picture, I am,

Respectfully yours,
LAURA M. JACOBS.

COLLIER FIREMEN OUT ON STRIKE

One hundred firemen on the colliers of the New England Coal and Coke Company are on a strike today. They claim their action will tie up all the coal-carrying vessels that come into Boston harbor, and if the company does not accede to their demands they say the engineers at Baltimore and other coal ports where the company's vessels put in will quit work. Organizer Alexander Morgan says that the Coal and Coke Company, which is a subsidiary company of the Gas Company, has not lived up to its agreement.

CUBAN IMMUNITY PERIOD ENDS TODAY

HAVANA, June 22.—The period in which the insurgents may surrender and secure immunity under the decree of General Montaguado, commander of the government forces, expires today. The result of the decree has been the surrender during the past ten days of several hundred negroes.

TO TRY AMERICAN CITIZEN AS SPY

LIEPSIC, Germany, June 22.—The imperial court on July 5 is to try Leopold Ehlers, a native of the island of Heligoland, but a naturalized American citizen, on a charge of espionage in the Rhine district. He has not applied to the United States consulate for assistance.

RICH JANITOR GIVES ADVICE

Save money and do not spend it foolishly.

The world is moving too fast for real pleasure. Be quiet and do not rush about too much.

People are money mad. They will do anything for money.

Several women have boldly intimated that they wanted to marry me. I know it was for my money.

I shall keep my money till I die, or lose my mind.

I made money through $6,000 I invested in Osceola copper stock on the advice of Major Henry L. Higginson, owner of the hotel.—

Alphonso L. Sherburne, janitor, about to retire with $150,000.

Alphonso L. Sherburne is about to retire as janitor of the Hotel Agassiz, an apartment house at No. 191 Commonwealth avenue, with a fortune of $150,000. He made most of this through a tip from Major Henry L. Higginson, owner of the hotel.

It was in the days when the copper stock Osceola went begging that Major Higginson demonstrated his friendship for Sherburne and gave him his greatest start toward fortune. He advised Sherburne to buy, and personally guaranteed the against loss. Sherburne invested his savings, $6,000, in 1,000 shares of copper stock at $6 a share. He still has those shares, their value being $126,500. In addition he owns a home at No. 171 Berkeley avenue, Roslindale, and a farm at Stoneham.

Bryan as Farmer.

He was born at Barrington, N. H., in January, 1837, son of a minister, and farmer. His five sisters married and settled down to lives as farmers' wives. He came to Boston and worked three years for John Shaw, a Jamaica Plain farmer.

He next worked for Mrs. E. B. Bryan of No. 61 Beacon street. It was during the thirteen years that he managed her farm at Cohasset that he saved his earnings and bought the house in Roslindale. He determined to resign this Spring in order to enjoy the remainder of his life with his wife, who was Miss Carrie Moore of St. John, N. B. She did not live to participate in their long awaited vacation, being afflicted with two strokes of paralysis. She died May 12.

"I don't know just what I shall do," said Mr. Sherburne. "I shall have to find something to occupy my time, but just what I do 't know. I may settle down on the farm in Stoneham and enjoy myself.

"I never drank a drop of liquor, although I have always voted for license, or smoked a pipe or cigar. I have always saved my money and not spent it foolishly. During the twenty-four years I have been here I never had a single argument or fight. I never had a word of complaint said to me. I could not ask better treatment. I think that Major Higginson is one of the finest men that ever lived.

Will End Days in Quietness.

"The world is moving too fast for real pelasure. I would rather be quiet than rush about as people do nowadays. I shall hold onto my money until I die, unless I lose my mind. I have five sisters and their children live at Barrington, N. H., whom I shall take care of in my will. My mother lived to be ninety-two and my father ninety. I expect to live to fifteen years more on this earth, the Lord willing.

"One thing I don't like is the habit people have of letting their children run the street so much. It is a shame. They should be kept in school and at home, and given a chance to play in their own yards.

"And people are money mad. They will do anything for money. Since the short time that I lost my dear wife, several women have boldly intimated that they wanted to marry me. I know it was for what money I have saved.

"I expect to leave it to my brother. The masons, plumbers, steamfitters, gasfitters, carpenters and plasterers are all at work here now, and when it is finished the hotel will be all ready for occupancy this fall when the people come back.

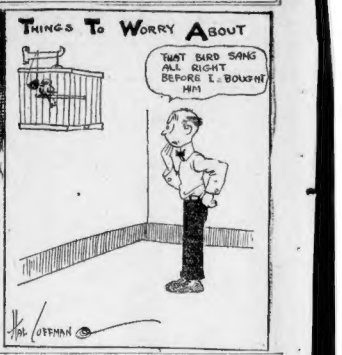
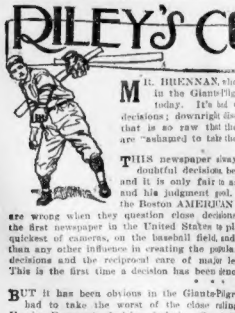
BIG SHAKEUP IS RUMORED IN NAPS BASEBALL TEAM

Mack's Champions Are Surely After That Top Rung

By Hal Coffman



RILEY'S COLUMN



MR. BRENNAN, who has been officiating as an umpire in the Giants-Pilgrims series, is "in bad" in Boston today. It's bad enough to take the worst of close decisions; downright discouraging to have to stand for one that is so raw that the followers of the victorious team are "ashamed to take the money."

THIS newspaper always gives the umpire the benefit of doubtful decisions because the umpire is on the ground and it is only fair to assume that his motives are honest, and his judgment good. Also, the expert photographers of the Boston AMERICAN have shown that usually the "fans" are wrong when they question close decisions. The Boston AMERICAN was the first newspaper in the United States to place expert photographers, with the quickest of cameras, on the baseball field, and their pictures were more effective than any other influence in creating the popular respect for major league umpires' decisions and the reciprocal care of major league umpires in making decisions. This is the first time a decision has been pronounced in this column.

BUT it has been obvious in the Giants-Pilgrims' series that the Pilgrims have had to take the worst of the close rulings, and since that has been true, Umpire Brennan's decision declaring Campbell out in the eighth inning of yesterday's game must be called the most obviously "raw" ruling that has been made at South End Park this year.

* * *

CAMPBELL reached first by an accidental hit. He was dodging one of "Rube" Marquard's close ones, when the ball hit his bat and bounded high, close to the plate. "Chief" Meyers threw wild to first and Campbell reached second. Sweney drove a clean single to left. Campbell had a good start, and slid on his back over the plate, clearly ahead of Murray's accurate throw home.

* * *

THE throw was high, Meyers taking it above his head as Campbell slid under him. He swung his arm with the ball, but he missed Campbell by about three feet. If he had touched him, Campbell would have been safe, as he was over the plate when Meyers caught the ball. Brennan called him out.

* * *

IT made no difference in the final result, but at that stage of the game there was no evidence as to what would be the final result. The Giants are after a pennant, Marquard is after a record and Boston crowds are patient.

* * *

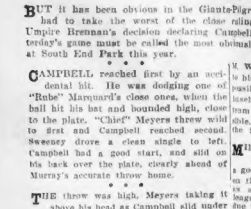
IT is wrong to challenge Brennan's motive, or to declare that he deliberately decided adversely to Boston. It is right to say that the decision was so unfair that even the newspaper writers with the Giants laughed at the umpire, and Meyers himself acted as if he had "put one over." Possibly Brennan gave Murray the benefit of their great baseball playing. In any case, it was NOT a close decision.

* * *

WE give the umpire the benefit of faith in his eyesight, his judgment and his fairness. In this case he was wrong, and the hope is that, appreciating that the Pilgrims still hold a National league franchise, although in last place just now, he will look out a bit better hereafter. Neither Brennan nor the National league can afford to stand for that kind of decision.

* * *

"DOC" Miller leaves us today and Titus of the Philadelphia Nationals replaces the erstwhile right-fielder. "The change may benefit both teams," said John



M. Ward. Miller has not been playing up to his usual standard this year, and it is possible that he is dissatisfied. Titus is a baseball veteran; it is questionable if the team needs any more veterans. It is good-bye, too, that if Miller was dissatisfied the feeling could have been remedied.

MILLER is naturally one of the best hitters in the National league; he is a good fielder and thrower, but a bit slow on the bases. "Doc" has as much ability as any other outfielder in the National league, and if his indifferent playing is due to dissatisfaction, Boston will lose by the change.

TITUS is a good outfielder, an excellent hitter and base runner. Kling was apparently anxious to make a trade by which he could dispose of Miller to good advantage to the team, and the only way you can figure whether Boston gets the best or worst of it is by the playing of both men hereafter.

* * *

IT is unfortunate to lose a man of Miller's calibre, just as it was unfortunate to lose Herzog, but "Hersy" simply couldn't play his best on the Boston team, and that may be the case with "Doc."

Somerville at Lynn (2 games).

NEW WRINKLES IN BASEBALL

PROFESSIONAL baseball since the last national agreement was signed has developed some features which were foreign to the sport in the old days.

For instance there is the engagement of the "scout," whose business is to watch the work of the younger players in the smaller leagues and independent and college clubs and endeavor to obtain good recruits for his manager.

Twenty years ago the "scout" was unknown. It is true that there were three or four men who made it their occupation to induce managers to sign players whom they believed had a future, but each club, or almost each club, did not engage its professional "look out" as is the case now.

Usually the president of a club, if he were a practical man, or the secretary, or perhaps the manager, would slip away for a day to watch some young player and perhaps try to come to an agreement with him.

IT was McGraw who originated the idea of signing an older player to assist in the coaching, and to impart what useful information he might when he added Latham to the roster of the Giants.

The innovation seemed to work so well in the minds of some of the managers that they, too, are following it.

The Chicago White Sox, for instance, have "Kid" Gleason, who, by the way, is a valuable man in the occupation of adviser. Philadelphia retains Moran for much the same purpose.

Griffith likes to have Schaefer with him, the Brooklyns have Keeler, the Giants have retained Wilbert Robinson, who is a capital assistant, and the Cincinnatis have "Heinie" Peitz.

ALL these men have a regular duty to perform, both in instructing players and acting as coaches. Their long experience is useful in handling base runners in ticklish situations and in the case of players like Robinson and Peitz, who have been worthy catchers in their time, in coaching young pitchers and assisting in keeping the older fellows up to form.

When Peitz appeared on the coaching line with Cincinnati there were many of the younger generation of baseball enthusiasts who did not recognize him.

Some of the older boys were compelled to take a second look before they were quite sure that it was he.

IF YOU should be up close to some of Mathewson's games, and listen to the lovely flow of language they can unloose when they once get going, it would be a shock to the virtue of a well brought up fan.

Over 90 per cent. of the players put out of games are sent off the diamond not for disputing decisions but for having too much and too highly colored language.

In England officials are treated with respect. We must breed the same sportsmanlike sentiment here by teaching clean sportsmanship to the kids. Make them grow up more manly in their attitude to the umpire and less suggestive of the mule."

Lefty Russell Sent Back to Connie Mack

CHATTANOOGA, June 22.—Disgusted with his poor work, Manager Charley Hempbill of the Atlanta Club has returned "Lefty" Russell to Connie Mack of the Athletics. To provide for the departure of the $12,000 pitcher, Erak Mayer was recalled from the Portsmouth Club of the Virginia League.

Big College Twirler Signed By Red Sox

George Stobie of the University of Maine baseball team has been signed up by the Red Sox and will join the team here on its return next week.

Stobie is a right-hander, and his height, 6 feet 2 inches, makes him the tallest pitcher now in the major league. His home is at Waterville, Me.

Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics was a bidder for his services, but President McAleer "beat him to it."

LORD IS LOYAL TO WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, June 22.—Harry Lord, of the Chicago White Sox, certainly has been giving a demonstration of gameness and incidentally he has been answering some of the fellows who claimed that he and Callahan didn't get along very well.

Lord is and has been playing with a sprained wrist since Sunday's game.

In the latter stages of that battle between the Sox and the Red Sox he attempted to stop a line drive which was headed for left field. He slowed it up a bit, but the ball struck him on the wrist.

He was advised to remain out of the game until the wrist became better. But he wouldn't. He declared that now, when the Sox were in a slump, was the time for every man on the club to go the limit. Lord certainly is.

Fatima Team Is Out for Diamond Honors

The Fatima baseball team clashed with the St. Mark's church team at Franklin Field this afternoon. The Fatima team is composed of former High school and college stars and is sure to take a fall out of a large number of the leading semi-professional teams of New England before the season comes to a close.

The lineup of the Fatima team is as follows: P. S. McNamara, a former New Orleans player, pitcher; W. E. Shaus, catcher; Godfrey, first base; Leonard, second base; Ford, shortstop; Daly, third base; Brawley, left field; Hayes, right field, and H. T. Booth, centre field and captain.

Champ Baseball 'Bug' Quits Giants for Cubs

NEW YORK, June 22.—Those who predicted a dull finish in the National League this season would better hedge. For Charley Faust has gone and left the Giants flat and has joined the Cubs to make the race close.

The Giants went away from here Wednesday. They had nothing on Charley, as he shipped his precious steeling, and when last seen was headed toward Philadelphia.

The "Real Adult" mascot stopped at Hotel Braddock and bade some of the Giants a last farewell before settling his accounts and trudging on his way. Then he confided his notion of joining the Cubs.

NAPS DUE FOR BIG SHAKEUP

DETROIT, June 22.—The Cleveland Naps are due for a sensational "shaking up." Davis has announced that the reconstructionists will be drafted from the Toledo, New Orleans and Brown University teams, and first the only players left in the Nap lineup will be Joe Jackson and Larry Lajoie. This means the benching of Captain Olson.

Of the catchers, not one has proved himself championship caliber. Livingstone is an old teammate of Davis' and for this reason he probably will be spared, but it is assured that O'Neill and Adams will be ditched. Grover Land probably will be recalled from Toledo.

Just who the Brown players Davis intends to get are not known. Earl Hitting, the Philadelphia High School boy, now with New Orleans, who was procured from the Naps, probably will be recalled.

Hartsel, manager of the Toledo crew, is a close and staunch friend of the Nap manager, and he will in all likelihood give Davis his choice of the Toledo men.

G. B. League Notes.

The new Salem team of the Greater Boston League, playing its first game as such at Ocean Park, Lynn, made the league leaders go eleven innings to take the long end of a 3-2 score. It was a classy exhibition of baseball all the way through.

* * *

South Boston, playing at the Lowell street grounds, clinched its hold on second place by walloping the Dorchester bunch 8 to 2. Everett-Chelsea shut out Somerville, 6 to 0 on the latter's home grounds, and pulled up a peg in the standing.

* * *

Orlando Venloit, who started the season with Somerville of the Greater Boston League, and who has been with Dorchester since the latter team has been reorganized by Manager Pfeffer. He is a big fellow and seems to have plenty of "stuff," but invariably weakens with men on bases.

* * *

Catcher Jerry Close, the Framingham kid, who is backstopping for the Dorchesters for G. B. L. team, sustained a broken finger in the game at South Boston.

"Hal" Briggs, the Salem collegian, who pitched the Everett Chelsea team of the Greater Boston League, playing first base, made a big hit with Somerville fans. He looks like the best first sacker in the circuit.

* * *

Jack Kiernan, manager of the South Boston Greater Boston League team, has signed a tall pitcher, Joe Rogers, a former South Boston high school star. He worked against Dorchester on the Lowell street grounds in Dorchester it is likely that the fans will be given an unusual treat, for Manager Pfeffer is so anxious to get his team up in the race that he is figuring on twirling both ends of the double bill himself. Although beaten by the Lynn speedsters in his first game, Big Jeff has had the hard hitters of the circuit eating out of his hand lately.

DARTMOUTH ATHLETIC MANAGER RESIGNS

HANOVER, N. H., June 22.—George A. Graves of Springfield, Mass., graduate manager of athletics at Dartmouth, has resigned after two years with the council. He will call a business meeting, at which time the athletic council some months ago of his intention to retire, but as yet no successor has been chosen. The council will hold a meeting tonight, when the new graduate manager will be chosen. Mr. Graves, however, will return to Hanover in the Fall and will give some time to the football season.

LOWELL SIGNS HALSTEIN.

Halstein, first baseman of the University of Vermont nine, has been taken on by the Lowell club. The White Sox wanted him, but he signed with Lowell first.

Crimson Crew Rowed Great Race Far Superior to Yale in Form

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS,
America's Greatest Amateur Oarsman.

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 22.—Yale's varsity eight left their float at Gales Ferry at 5:30 o'clock. Harvard got in their boat a few minutes later at Red Top and paddled out to the starting line, which is opposite.

There was a five-mile breeze blowing up the river, which they had to row against, but the tide had been running down the stream for two hours, which was much assistance to the crews. As the race proceeded down the river the wind was shifting more to the west.

Yale was the first to get on the line. Harvard followed a few minutes later. As the cross tide was running at the stake boats they had trouble in getting in position.

It was not long before Referee Middleham sent them away together, but Yale seemed to get the better of the start. Harvard put in six or seven short slow strokes for the first minute, while Yale rowed thirty-eight. They had not gone a quarter of a mile before Harvard had a half length on Yale.

At the half-mile Harvard's time was 2:33; Yale's 2:37. Yale had settled down to thirty to the minute, while Harvard was rowing thirty-two, going along nicely. Yale's bow man was hitting the tops of the waves on the recovery of his stroke and he was catching short, in other words, clipping his stroke.

Yale's rowing was not as smooth as Harvard's by any means. They passed the mile post in 5:15 for Harvard, and Yale 5:18½. There was open water between the two boats and it looked very much as though the race was all over.

Harvard's Great Form.

Yale seemed to be laboring heavily, while Harvard had a great deal more dash and vim in their swell. The Crimson crew caught the water like eight clean scullers. They were very quick and smooth on the catch, and it was very noticeable how slow and raw Yale was on the catch.

Yale was using a much longer body swing than Harvard. It was very noticeable how long Harvard made her strokes. They seemed to pull it through better than when I saw them in practice a week ago. Their rowing was very pretty. Their boat seemed to run through the water more smoothly than Yale's.

Harvard was leading by two lengths at the mile and one half. Yale was rowing 32. Harvard was rowing 33. When the Navy Yard, at the two-mile post was reached, Harvard had increased it to three lengths. Harvard's time was 10:20. Yale's was 10:58.

At this time Yale's crew seemed to be going to pieces and their watermanship seemed to be very ragged. But they gamely stuck to their work. Stroke Snowden deserves a great deal of credit for the manner in which he drove his men.

At the two-mile and one-half mark it began to look very much like a procession. Harvard's time was 13.25 and Yale's 13.56.

As they passed the three-mile-and-a-half point, Yale had gained a little, but Harvard was still three lengths to the good.

Harvard was leading by eight lengths at Yarde's time was 21:43½, and Yale's 22:04.

Jim Wray's good advice at the last moment to the Harvard freshmen eight was not to make a runaway race of it, but to get a lead at the start then increase it gradually. This was carried out to the letter.

Harvard seemed to row well within themselves, while Yale's men were laboring under their stroke. In this part of the race Jim Wray's rounding stood Harvard well in hand. Any one could see that the race was all over at the mile stake.

The mile-and-a-half mark was reached in 7:17 and Yale 7:17. Yale looked to be all in, and was laboring badly, and their rowing was very ragged, while, on the other hand, Harvard was rowing a clean stroke, with plenty in reserve, and taking no chances. Harvard passed the winning post in 10:52, and Yale, 10:54½.

The four-oared varsity shell race was started at the Navy Yard and rowed up stream, with a light breeze and a slack tide with them. The Yale crew caught the water first, rowing thirty-six to the minute, while Harvard was rowing forty.

Harvard immediately forged ahead and it wasn't long before open water was seen between the boats. Yale was using the long body swing and short slides.

Harvard continued to increase foot by foot in a very smooth style. They passed the mile post in 5.24 and Yale was 5.36. Harvard led Yale by three lengths at this point.

MEN'S Complaints CURED

EXPERIENCE. PRACTICE. KNOWLEDGE.
The three essentials to our success—the three positive, safe and secure means we possess in curing our patients. Are these not the best credentials? Do you want a more positive guarantee that the Pilgrims still hold a National league franchise, although in last place just now, he will look out a bit better hereafter. Neither Brennan nor the National league can afford to stand for that kind of decision.

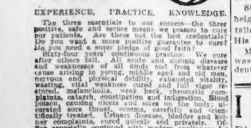
"DOC" Miller leaves us today and Titus of the Philadelphia Nationals replaces the erstwhile right-fielder. "The change may benefit both teams," said John



M. Ward. Miller has not been playing up to his usual standard this year, and it is possible that he is dissatisfied. Titus is a baseball veteran; it is questionable if the team needs any more veterans. It is good-bye, too, that if Miller was dissatisfied the feeling could have been remedied.

MILLER is naturally one of the best hitters in the National league; he is a good fielder and thrower, but a bit slow on the bases. "Doc" has as much ability as any other outfielder in the National league, and if his indifferent playing is due to dissatisfaction, Boston will lose by the change.

TITUS is a good outfielder, an excellent hitter and base runner. Kling was apparently anxious to make a trade by which he could dispose of Miller to good advantage to the team, and the only way you can figure whether Boston gets the best or worst of it is by the playing of both men hereafter.

* * *

IT is unfortunate to lose a man of Miller's calibre, just as it was unfortunate to lose Herzog, but "Hersy" simply couldn't play his best on the Boston team, and that may be the case with "Doc."

Olympic Schedule Favors Yankees

Opening Event Takes Place July 6

According to the revised schedule of athletic events for the sixth revival of the Olympiad at Stockholm, Sweden, next month, America's wonderful army of champions should have little difficulty in successfully defending the championship of the world.

The official program has just been received by cable at the offices of the American Olympic committee in New York.

This shows the various events to be so well arranged that Americans who have been entered in more than one competition will have plenty of time to recuperate between trials.

As will be noted in the appended program the Swedish Olympiad will be inaugurated Saturday morning, July 6, and will continue until Monday, July 15.

The javelin throw has been assigned the honor of the opening event. The Marathon race, the real classic of the historic sports, is set for Sunday, July 14.

The newly arranged schedule is as follows:

SATURDAY, JULY 6.

Throwing javelin, best hand, final; 10,000 metres flat, heats (if necessary); 100 metres flat, heats; 800 metres flat, heats.

SUNDAY, JULY 7.

Running high jump, heats (if necessary); 10,000 metres flat, final; 100 metres flat, final; 800 metres flat, final.

Pentathlon—Running broad jump; throwing javelin, best hand; 200 metres flat; throwing discus, best hand; 1,500 metres flat.

MONDAY, JULY 8.

Running high jump, final, heats (if necessary); standing broad jump, final; relay race, 30 metres, heats; walking race, 10,000 metres, heats.

TUESDAY, JULY 9.

Throwing javelin, right and left hand, final; 1,500 metres flat, heats; 5,000 metres flat, heats; relay race, 400 metres, final.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10.

Pole vault, final; putting weight, best hand, final; 200 metres flat, heats; 1,500 metres flat, final; 5,000 metres flat, final.

THURSDAY, JULY 11.

Putting weight, right and left hand, final; 200 metres flat, final; hurdle race, 110 metres, heats; walking race, 10,000 metres, final.

FRIDAY, JULY 12.

Running broad jump, final; throwing discus, best hand, final; 400 metres flat, heats; team race, 3,000 metres, heats; hurdle race, 110 metres, final.

SATURDAY, JULY 13.

Standing high jump, final; throwing discus, right and left hand, final; 400 metres flat, final; team race, 3,000 metres, final.

SUNDAY, JULY 14.

Throwing the hammer, final; marathon race, 40,200 metres, final; relay race, 1,600 metres, heats.

Decathlon—100 metres flat, running broad jump, putting the weight, best hand, running high jump, 400 metres flat.

MONDAY, JULY 15.

Relay race, 1,800 metres, final; cross-country race, 8,000 metres, final.

Decathlon—Hurdle race, 110 metres, throwing discus, best hand; pole jump, throwing javelin, best hand; 1,500 metres, flat, hop, step and jump, final.

Johnson 10-4 in Early Bets

EAST LAS VEGAS, N. M., June 22.—Tom Flanagan of Toronto, Canada, who superintended Jack Johnson's training when the heavyweight champion prepared for his battle with Jim Jeffries, is in Las Vegas today.

It is stated by Johnson's corp of handlers that Professor Watson Burns will continue to look out for Lil Artha and that Flanagan will shine in the roll of business manager.

One of the first things Flanagan was acquainted with was the fact that the ring for the July 4 contest measured but seventeen feet six and one-half inches under the dimensions prescribed by the Marquis of Queensberry, and that the curtailed ring broadened the Flynn chance for victory.

"The ring looks big to me," Finnegan said after gazing at the already completed platform.

"How does the champion look to you," Flanagan was asked.

"Fine," was the Canadian's reply. "I have not seen Jack much since we made our triumphant exit from Reno. Outwardly he looks like the same old Jack to me. However, I save yet to see him stripped or in action. He is down to 220 pounds and that should prove that he is in good trim."

Hetting Commissioner John T. Talbot has announced going a land office business. Johnson rules favorite at ten to four and a lot of wagers, mostly small ones, were placed at that figure.

Revere Cycle Track To Open on Saturday

Popping motorcycles will be heard at the Revere cycle track next Saturday night for the first time this season. Boston and vicinity, long the home or the sport, has this year been lost on the bike map, but with the events next Saturday and those planned for each week following, lovers of racing will have their opportunity to again witness the sport.

The card of events is not yet complete but the principal race will be for twenty-five miles behind the motors and the starters will be the three best men in America today, Jimmy Moran of Chelsea, George Wiley of Brooklyn, and Percy Lawrence of San Francisco. Elmer Collins, the champion, is at present riding in Germany.

In addition to the paced event there will be professional and amateur sprint contests and a race has been added for novices to give the newcomers a chance to score.

Poughkeepsie Crews All Rowing in Fine Form in Time Trials

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 22.—Columbia had their first serious time trial this morning, being paced by the freshmen and four oared crews as far as the Pennsylvania boathouse, while Coach Rice, on the launch went on with the varsity eight to the finish.

It was a rattling last mile that Columbia rowed, finishing in fine condition. The crew was watched with much interest from Cornell boathouse as it finished.

Columbia stock is steadily rising and there are many who believe that this crew will be an even favorite with Cornell. McCarthy was back in the boat in the Columbia four.

He has been out with a bad hand, which is again all right. Robinson returned to his old seat from stroke, replacing Claghorn.

Storm clouds hung over the Hudson early today and a strong head wind made the river rough.

The crews rowed in the rain, hugging the west shore, where there was a narrow strip of smooth water, and doing little more than a limbering up exercise.

The Wisconsin freshmen had damaged their shell in returning from the practice, so the crew rowed tonight in a four-oared boat, the bow four going out first and then the stern four.

Stroke Partridge of Stanford, who is a little under weight, stayed out of the boat. Walford, No. 6, took his place, and Substitute Clover went in at 6.

The Pennsylvania varsity eight showed up well in the practice, and Coach Ward said that it was the best rowing he had seen the crew do this year.

Alden and Smith in B. A. A. Golf Finals

M. Alden and V. M. Smith will meet today in the final round for the golf championship for the B. A. A. title at the Wollaston G. C., the latter disposed of their opponents yesterday in the semi-finals.

Alden beat H. E. Lodge by 3 and 2 and V. M. Smith won over J. J. Kennedy by 7 and 6.

BROWN AND M'GOORTY TO BATTLE JULY 4

CHICAGO, June 22.—George "Knockout" Brown and Eddie McGoorty, the Oshkosh fighter, have been matched to go ten rounds at Benton Harbor on the afternoon of July 4, weight to be 158 pounds at 10 o'clock in the morning. McGoorty is going to do his training in Indianapolis, while Brown will work here.

LYNN CLASSICAL PICKS HARRINGTON

Al Harrington was unanimously elected captain of the Lynn Classical High nine. He was considered the best pitcher the school has had in a number of years and he has two more years in school.

"Doc" Miller Traded to Quakers for Titus

A deal has been put through by Manager Johnny Kling of the Pilgrims which will bring to Boston John Titus, an outfielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, in exchange for "Doc" Miller, the star right fielder of the Pilgrims.

The trade will take effect immediately. Titus will probably take his place in the Pilgrims' outfield today.

In discussing the trade, President John M. Ward of the Boston Nationals said: "The trade was made by John Kling and may be better for the interests of both teams. The trade will take effect immediately."

The deal came as a big surprise to the close followers of the Pilgrims. Miller was considered a valuable man and one of the best fielders and hitters of the Boston team. Last season he led the National League in batting.

"Titus is well known to the local "fans" having played with the Phillies here for many seasons.

Horse Makes High Jump of 7½ Feet With Rider

LONDON, June 22.—A new record for high jumping by horses was established by the mount of the Hon. C. Sifton of Canada, in the International Horse Show at Olympia today. The Canadian horse cleared a bar 7 feet 5½ inches high carrying a rider. This remarkable performance caused a stir among the horse fanciers gathered in the stand.

Free Baseball Ticket In Sunday's American

Now that Salem has entered a team in the Greater Boston League the school boy and girl "fans" of that section will have a good chance to witness some real live baseball.

How? Just by clipping the coupon which will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. is there anything easier than that? Remember it costs nothing. The AMERICAN coupon pays your way.

The young "fans" of Salem are not the only ones who can see the games on this ticket. Any boy or girl who is under sixteen years of age will be admitted to any one of the Greater Boston League grounds by simply presenting the coupon in the ticket taker.

Don't forget to clip the coupon from tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. If you pass up this opportunity you are losing something worth while. See a real championship baseball game at the expense of the AMERICAN.

Fred Snodgrass Not Popular in 'Philly'

The Philadelphia papers "panned" Snodgrass thusly last week:

"Fred Snodgrass is a ball player who could be a favorite with the fans, but he won't have it that way, and he pulled over an old trick on the stops when he moved into a slow ball, permitted it to tag his chest and earned an amble to the opening bag.

"Then he began to ball Seaton. He yelled and he whooped, and then was called by the umpires, and the fans ballyhooed him loudly for his tactics. This little play recalls history, the world's series of last year, when he twice worked that old army game of taking a slow pitch on the shoulders and then claiming he was hit.

"In the opening game he pulled it over on Chief Bender no less than twice in two outs up and got away with it. He will always try it in a pinch. The third time he attempted the play he was called back. Chief Bender was wise, too, and the Indian put some over that would have flattened the New Yorker had they hit him.

"Bender used all of his juice and he whirled them over the plate like rifle balls. He and Snodgrass so badly worried that he yelled to the umpires, 'Bender is trying to beat me!'"

Abeles and Snowden Elected to Lead Harvard and Yale Crews

NEW LONDON, Ct., June 22. The Harvard varsity eleven have elected C. T. Abeles, coxswain of their class crew, captain of next year's crew. Abeles is a member of the class of 1913 and comes from St. Louis, Mo.

It is one of the few times in the entire history of college aquatics that a coxswain has been chosen captain.

Those who participated for Harvard in yesterday's two varsity races, the eight and the four-oared, were eligible to cast votes, and while the balloting was not unanimous, it was stated at training quarters after the election that Geodale received only four votes.

The selection of Abeles over Geodale, who has been rowing at No. 4 oar, was a big surprise, but the majority of the crew men should have supported Abeles in preference to Geodale is sure to leave a far-reaching influence and is generally regarded as meaning that next season there will be a change in some of the policies.

Abeles is a warm supporter of Coach Wray, and while the Harvard coach was at the Mound City Rowing Club in St. Louis was coxswain of the club eight there.

After yesterday's race, C. N. Snowden, 1912, of Pittsburgh, Pa., stroke of this year's crew, was elected captain of the Yale crew for next year.

Attell Now a Real Lightweight

Will Meet Murphy and Wolgast

By JACK CONWAY.

ABE ATTELL, the former featherweight champion, will make a mighty effort to regain his lost ring prestige, when he clashes in a twenty round bout with "Harlem" Tommy Murphy at Daly City, Cal., on July 4. These men met at San Francisco last March and the New York lightweight won after twenty rounds of fast and furious fighting.

Attell is now in grand condition and he believes that he is destined to become the lightweight champion of the world. The wonderful little Hebrew has quit the ranks of the featherweights for good. He realizes that he wouldn't stand the ghost of a chance of defeating the youthful Johnny Kilbane, the present title holder.

Also, however, thinks that he has an excellent opportunity to annex the lightweight title if Attell can defeat Murphy, he will be matched to clash with Champion Ad Wolgast some time in August, provided that the Michigan "Wildcat" is also a winner in his twenty round championship bout with Joe Rivers which takes place at Venice, Cal., on July 4.

Billy Nolan, who is now manager of Attell, has worked wonders with the former prince of the 122 pounders. It will be remembered that it was Nolan who made Battling Nelson lightweight champion of the world after he had been defeated by Joe Gans at Goldfield, Nev., and was supposed to be all in. In discussing Attell's future, Nolan said:

"Abe is still a grand performer and I am certain that he will triumph over a large number of title chasers before he lays aside the padded mitts. I have $10,000 to wager that he can defeat Ad Wolgast. Attell now weighs 123 pounds, which is ten pounds heavier than he has been at any time during his career in the squared circle.

"In the future when the Frisco boy battles with lightweights, he will be just as strong as they are. I am confident that he will win from Murphy on the Fourth of July. Abe realizes that his entire future depends upon the result of his bout with the Harlem real estate magnate, and before that I say that he will battle like a demon and from the tap of the gong at the opening of the first round until the round comes to an end.

JERRY LUCENTE, an amateur boxer who hails from Spokane, Wash., called at the office today. Lucente weighs 115 pounds and is eager to get a special bout with Jack Noonan of Dorchester or Tommy Reagan of East Boston or any amateur having insurance. Lucente is a fast, shifty boxer and packs a good wallop in either hand.

Twombly Captain of Medford High Nine

Medford High baseball nine have elected Clarence F. Twombly, Jr., captain of the 1913 team. He is the son of Clarence Twombly, Sr., ex-lawmaker.

This year his stick work has been good and it was due to his timely batting that Medford has practically won the Suburban League championship for the fourth consecutive year. He is not a lucky batter, but a natural one. A fine infielder and excellent baserunner and a clean player.

Medford High will play its final game of the season with Malden High on the latter's grounds this afternoon and it must win this in order to take the champion ship banner for the fourth time.

JOHNNY GLOVER HAS SHADE OVER GINTY

SCRANTON, Pa., June 22.—In six fast rounds before the Douglas A. C. Johnny Glover outboxed Tommy Ginty and won the popular decision. Ginty's bulldog rushes showed up the Boston boy in the fifth, but he was never in danger and he landed on the local fighter's stomach and jaw at will. It was Ginty's first appearance since he broke his right hand in a ten round go with Dick Hyland six months ago. The hand is still weak and he was compelled to lead with his left.

Freaks of Fashion

The Telescope Parasol—Something New, Pretty and Useful

By OLIVETTE

WHEN will the stout woman come into her own again?

Everything is made for the thin woman. Skirts, which were to have been wider, as fashion authorities in Paris informed us, are becoming even more contracted, all new articles of furniture are designed for the slight person, and here comes an umbrella that will make the stout woman look positively grotesque by comparison, for it is the last word in attenuated structure. It is the telescope umbrella.

An ingenious device allows it to be pulled out into a long, tightly-rolled walking-stick or pushed back into one of the Empress Eugenie umbrellas of white silk lined in rose color.

A Smart Adjunct

It is another of those fanciful accessories which make the up-to-date woman look smart while helping to raise the average cost of living.

If you can't afford this up-to-the-minute freak in the way of sun shades, go to the nearest Japanese store and buy a paper umbrella. Then you will be following in the fashionable footsteps of society women in Newport, who affect these sunshades with plain white frocks for morning and with the all-prevailing white serge suit in the afternoon. Only please remember that the paper parasol is sufficiently variegated in color and needs a white or dull tone frock to set it off. If it's carried with some of our vivid colored frocks it looks too much like a conflagration.

No costume seems quite complete nowadays without the tiny corsage bouquet of flowers; clever imitations rather than the real thing. The old-fashioned bouquet has a paper frill and is made of odd little blossoms that ought to grow in old-time gardens. This novelty has brought forward a great number of clever women who, with deft fingers, muslin and paints, make these tiny bunches of flowers, which sell at prices more substantial than one would think.

This is the best season to think about next Autumn's wardrobe, as it is the great time of bargains.

White materials are going for a song, and if you have strength of mind enough to contemplate the idea of buying furs for next Winter, when the thermometer is in the nineties, you will never get them as cheap again.

Furs go right along up in price every year, and dear pussy's coat dyed and disguised as mink is worth a small fortune in cold weather. During the dog days pussy's fur isn't so valuable, and all other furs are cheaper, too. So now's the time to buy.

A Bargain

The other day I saw a Summer bargain —a linen dress bought ready made for a little more than a dollar. The clever girl who bought it had added several bits of insertion on sleeves and yoke and she had embroidered it in cross-stitch beebles, making a really stunning frock of her bargain. These touches, the addition of a smart sash and a frilled collar make your bargain counter purchase an individual frock and stamp it with your personality at a very small cost, too.

One of the new ideas in sashes is silk with two wide loops, but no ends. The belt fastens in the back and the bow is put on at a decided slant, also in the back.

A new fichu is made of three rows of fine muslin with scalloped edges, finished off with a narrow lace edging.

A large bouquet of violets in natural shades was embroidered on the front of a lace bodice, and partly over the ribbon belt which went with it. This was a French model and the flowers looked as if they had just been stuck into the wearer's girdle.

The latest thing in collars shows two deep points at the back of a very high and tightly boned collar. Quite a bustle to the girl with the long, slender neck who wants to hide an ugly line behind the ears or at the back of the neck. The Medici collar or ruff of lace standing out from a V-shaped opening at the throat is pretty and most becoming, as it softens the hard line of the ordinary half boned, half high collar.

Fog Horn Tales

THE WONDERFUL CHICKEN

By HANK.

"H-O-O-O" blew the fog horn as the Pilot entered the lighthouse and shook the spray from his sou'wester, spattering the water in the face of the Captain, who was dozing in his favorite armchair.

"Pat-at-at!" he sputtered, suddenly awakening, and brushing off the water from his forehead he glared at the pilot savagely.

"Keep cool," said the visitor, "I did not mean it. It was only a little water anyway and you don't have to look at me like a hungry dinosaurus."

"A vat?" asked the Captain suspiciously.

"A dinosaurus or a gila monster," said the Pilot; "I don't know much about them dinosauruses, but I do know about them gila monsters. They're big lizards that are poisonous as snakes and live on air."

"Air, nodding but air!" said the Captain; "are you kiddding mit me?"

What the Pilot Saw

"No," replied the Pilot, solemnly, "that's a fact. I know, because I had a personal experience with one."

"Dot don't prove nodhings to me," said the Captain, "but still I down mind hearing about id."

"Well," began the Pilot, "I had occasion to travel through the Arizona desert once, and I came upon a dried-up well about twenty feet deep. Its sides were nothing but perfectly smooth sand, and down at the bottom was one of these gila monsters. It would walk around and then start to climb up, trying to get out. After it got up about three feet it would slip back to the bottom. I watched it for half an hour, climbing up and slipping back, and then went away, wondering how long the thing would keep it up before it died of starvation. Two years later I happened to be coming back East and passed the same dried up well. Wondering whether any other animals had fallen into it, I gazed over the edge and, would you believe it, there was the same gila monster still climbing up and slipping back again."

"Hm-m," said the Captain, after a few moments of silence, "dot vas a pretty good vun, but I know a bedder vun, un mine iss der truth."

"Have it your own way," said the Pilot good naturedly; "what is your story?"

A Wonderful Chicken

"It iss about a chicken vot, on dee face of id, didn't live on noddings at all until ve found cod aloond id. Its name vas Peter, und vun day id disappeared. Id vas vile I vas sailing der schooner Gretchen. Vell, after two weeks after Peter disappeared ve made port und took out der cargo. My mate Hans vas pulling some of der cases off of each oddor vun suddenly a chicken runned out und it vas Peter. He bat accidentally become cooped up under some of der cases und had been a prisoner for two weeks! Den Hans der mate looked down in der place vere der chicken bat been und he sees eggs shells laying all around der place, und you nefter guess vot ve found oud."

"No, I can't," said the Pilot.

"Vy vee found chicken found oud it could get noddings to eat it vould lay vun egg a day und den eat der egg, und dot's how——"

"Ho-o-o!" blew the fog horn.

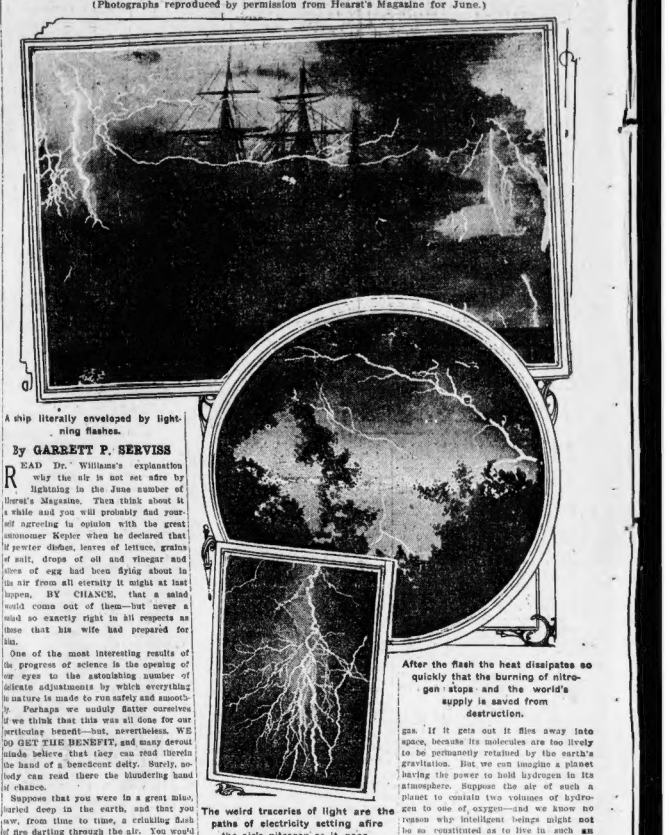
Can You Read Design in Nature?

The Atmosphere Might Have Been Composed So That Lightning Would Burn or Explode It

(Photographs reproduced by permission from Hearst's Magazine for June.)



A ship literally enveloped by lightning flashes.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

READ Dr. Williams's explanation why the air is not set afire by lightning in the June number of Hearst's Magazine. Then think about it a while and you will probably find yourself agreeing to opinion with the great astronomer Kepler when he declared that if pewter dishes, leaves of lettuce, grains of salt, drops of oil and vinegar and slices of egg had been flying about in the air from all eternity it might at last happen, BY CHANCE, that a salad would come out of them—but never a salad so exactly right in all respects as those that his wife had prepared for him.

One of the most interesting results of the progress of science is the opening of our eyes to the astonishing number of delicate adjustments by which everything in nature is made to run safely and smoothly. Perhaps we unduly flatter ourselves if we think that this was all done for our particular benefit—but, nevertheless, WE DO GET THE BENEFIT, and many devout minds believe that they can read therein the hand of a beneficent deity. Surely, nobody can read there the blundering hand of chance.

Suppose that you were in a great mine, buried deep in the earth, and that you saw, from time to time, a crinkling flash of fire darting through the air. You would think to yourself through fear. You would believe that at any moment the whole mine might be blown up. You would irrationally recall many stories of terrific mine explosions, and you would find difficulty in reassuring yourself, even if some scientific companions said to you, "Don't be afraid. THIS air can't burn. The flashes you see put themselves out too quickly. There is a little burning, but it can't extend. The composition of the air makes you safe." Nevertheless, you would get out of that mine at the first opportunity.

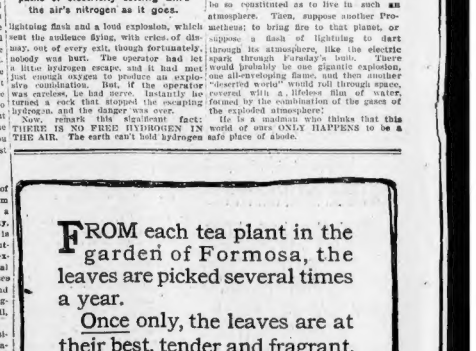
The weird traceries of light are the paths of electricity setting afire the air's nitrogen as it goes.

A Kind of Mine

Now, when you are on the surface of the earth you are in a kind of mine, from which you cannot escape. Every time a bolt of lightning darts through the sky, it burns a little of the nitrogen, which is one of the two principal gases constituting the atmosphere. If that burning extended, as it sometimes extends in a coal mine, where other inflammable gases abound, it would be all over with you and your companions in a moment. One magnificent flame, sweeping valley and hill, and goodbye to this world.

But we are protected by the composition of the air. Nitrogen is not inflammable. In ordinary circumstances it will not burn. An intense electric flash can burn a little of it, lying in the track of the discharge, but outside that narrow space the heat is so quickly dissipated that the burning ceases as soon as it begins. Oxygen, the other principal gas of the atmosphere, which is a great supporter and encourager of combustion, is there in abundance, but, nevertheless, the inertness of the nitrogen, its indisposition to burn, is so great that it refuses to catch fire as a whole. It defies the lightning, as a chemically prepared paper defies a flame. There is a little local charring, but the fire cannot spread.

Now, look in another direction. From air turn to water. Water is composed of two gases—oxygen and hydrogen. Hydrogen is inflammable. Oxygen is a supporter of flame, although it does not itself burn. When they are combined into the liquid called water, which contains two volumes of hydrogen to one of oxygen, they do not burn. But take the hydrogen out of the water, as can be done in a laboratory, and it burns with ease.



After the flash the heat dissipates so quickly that the burning of nitrogen stops and the world's supply is saved from destruction.

An Experiment

That great experimental philosopher, Michael Faraday, used to delight his audiences—the elders as much as the youngsters—by putting one volume of oxygen and two volumes of hydrogen together in a stout glass bulb, and then passing an electric spark through them. Flash! The oxygen and hydrogen both disappeared in an instant, and a little water, formed by their explosive combustions, trickled down the inner sides of the bulb. That was all that remained.

I was once the witness of a very startling accident due to allowing a little hydrogen to come into contact with oxygen in the presence of a flame. You know that the oxy-hydrogen light used with the stereopticon is produced by combining jets of oxygen and hydrogen and setting them on fire against a stick of chalk. The intense heat makes the chalk glow like a little sun. One night, while giving a lecture in New York the operator of the lantern carelessly allowed a rubber tube, to slip out of place. Instantly there was a lightning flash and a loud explosion, which sent the audience flying, with cries of dismay, out of every exit, though fortunately, nobody was hurt. The operator had let a little hydrogen escape, and it had met just enough oxygen to produce an explosive combination. But, if the operator was careless, he had nerve. Instantly he turned a cock that stopped the escaping hydrogen, and the danger was over.

Now, remark this significant fact: THERE IS NO FREE HYDROGEN IN THE AIR. The earth can't hold hydrogen gas. If it gets out it flies away into space, because its molecules are too lively to be permanently retained by the earth's gravitation. But we can imagine a planet having the power to hold hydrogen in its atmosphere. Suppose the air of such a planet to contain two volumes of hydrogen to one of oxygen—and we know no reason why intelligent beings might not be so constituted as to live in such an atmosphere. Then, suppose another Prometheus; to bring fire to that planet, or suppose a flash of lightning to dart through its atmosphere, like the electric spark through Faraday's bottle. There would probably be one gigantic explosion, one all-enveloping flame, and then another "deserted world" would roll through space, covered with a lifeless film of water, formed by the combination of the gases of the exploded atmosphere!

He is a madman who thinks that this world of ours ONLY HAPPENS to be a safe place of abode.

Hunting a Husband

No. 12—The Widow Is Surprised While in the Midst of Denouncing Her Youthful Suitor

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

IT is unfortunate that the glow of self-satisfaction one experiences after being delivered a merited rebuke or snub should not be permanent. After uttering over the telephone her frigid reply to Maynard, Beatrice returned to the drawing room and to Henry Blanchard, congratulating herself upon her strength of will and purpose. But, as the evening wore on, she became less confident that she had acted wisely.

Henry Blanchard proved to be a less interesting companion than Robert. He talked no more of his possible matrimonial venture, but discoursed of his business life, his old friends, his political views, and, although Beatrice tried to appear interested, she found herself obliged at times to swallow a yawn, and her eyes turned involuntarily toward the clock. Rising away so slowly on the mantel shelf. She contrasted this evening with the one Maynard had spent with her, remembering how that had fled all too fast, and how much she enjoyed it.

She did not suggest playing and singing for Blanchard, for he had said he cared little for music. While she was glad that he did not make it necessary for her to express any more decided views as to his right to marry if he chose, she felt that that topic would, at least, have contained some degree of interest or even of excitement. She breathed an inaudible sigh of relief when, at half past eleven, he bade her good night and took his departure, asking if he might call again soon. She said that he might, but added, as she had with Maynard, that she did not know just now when she would have another free evening. But, unlike Maynard, he did not ask her to notify him when she would be at leisure, but said that he would "drop in some evening next week," on the chance of finding her at home.

Too Tired to Think of Them

After he had gone she was too tired and sleepy to consider the matter of her two suitors, but deferred such consideration to a more convenient and comfortable season.

The following afternoon she sat down quietly to think out the situation and to review mentally once more Robert's behavior after his various libations, and again her anger rose. Her indignation was increased by the recollection that she was, apparently, now in the position where she must make the next advance if she would see him. She longed to have the opportunity of declining some invitation from him in such a way that he would understand that he had incurred her displeasure and ask for an explanation.

"And he shall have one if he asks for it," she muttered between set teeth.

Yes, she was angry with him for having taken a little too much liquor, but she was, perhaps unconsciously, also vexed at the knowledge that he had destroyed her ideal of him as a probable husband. He had, in fact, upset her plans.

And, while she thus mused, Mrs. Robbins stopped in to see her on her way home from a shopping expedition. Beatrice was not overjoyed at Helen's visit, but she welcomed her pleasantly, wondering meanwhile if her caller had come to ascertain if Henry Blanchard had been here last night. If so, she would find Beatrice on her guard.

To her surprise, however, Helen chose another method of irritating her friend and possibly aunt-in-law.

"My dear," she said, after she was comfortably seated and had begun to sip a cup of the tea which Beatrice always had served at this hour of the afternoon, "I have come to talk to you with regard to something I heard a few days ago. Is it true that you went driving with Robert Maynard?"

"It is true," said Beatrice stiffly. "And, pray, why should I not go with Mr. Maynard if I choose?"

For Your Interests

"Now, dear," protested Helen, "don't get cross at my asking such an innocent question as that. Were I not fond of you and interested in him I would pay no attention to the matter. But I was so pleased to hear that you are encouraging the dear fellow that I just couldn't resist the temptation to tell you so."

"Encouraging him!" exclaimed Beatrice indignantly. "Upon my word, Helen, that is a peculiar term to use in this connection. Your match-making tendencies cause you to appear actually ridiculous; just because a man whom I have met a few times asks me to go for a drive with him, and we stop for tea on the way home, you say I encourage him! I never thought of such a thing."

But her friend laughed good naturedly.

"Ah, Beatrice," she mocked, "if there were not some truth in my assertion you would not get so angry! It is only the truth that hurts, you know. And, my dear," dropping her bantering tone and looking tenderly sympathetic, "I am so glad to think that you are good to poor Robert. He deserves it. Which," she added significantly, "is more than I can say for some men."

Beatrice looked at her, perplexed. "What do you mean?" she asked.

Saw Through Her

"Oh, nothing, except that Robert was a very generous husband and always gave his wife everything she wanted—which is not what most husbands do for their wives. Perhaps I appreciate it more because all the men in my family—excepting, of course, my husband—are so close in money matters. Why, even dear old Uncle Henry will pinch a silver dollar until the eagle on it screams with anguish."

Then Beatrice knew that Helen had come with the purpose of lessening Henry Blanchard's chances with the widow by representing him as parsimonious, and with the intention of furthering Robert's suit by extolling his liberality. And, although Beatrice saw Helen's game, she could not help wondering if, after all, there might not be some truth in her statements. Had not Robert taken her to supper and brought her home in a cab, given her costly violets and taken her to tea, while Henry Blanchard had never done anything except call on her? Was their conduct really indicative of the characters of the two men? And then, suddenly, she resented anew Helen's interference.

"It is no concern of mine whether any man is stingy or not," she said loftily. "And as for Robert Maynard, he cares no more for me than I do for him—and, goodness knows, I'm not breaking my heart for any widower!"

Helen looked grave. "I think," she said, "that he cares a great deal for you. You are the only woman to whom he has paid any attention since his wife's death."

"Well," announced Beatrice, her temper still ruling her tongue, "I am tired of hearing of his wife, anyway; and, besides that, I would not trust any man who is fond of liquor as he is."

"Since when," queried Helen coldly, "have you become such a stickler for temperance? I did not notice that you disapproved of my husband and Robert each taking a highball when we were at supper at the Plaza."

"No," retorted Beatrice, "I did not mind, nor should I ever mind if a man took only one drink on one occasion. But your friend, the widower, does not stop at one—more's the pity!"

In her excitement Beatrice had spoken loudly and excitedly. Before Helen could reply the drawing-room portieres were swept aside and the maid announced to the startled pair:

"Mr. Maynard!"

A Mysterious Disappearance

One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written

By Gordon Holmes

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

PART I.—(Continued)

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode

HE could not have been collared more effectually by a Rugby international team.

The third man found the electric light and turned it on.

"Now, get us," said someone, "and don't give us any more trouble. It's no use."

The barrister, who had had his wind knocked out of him, rose to his knees. Then, as the light fell upon the horrified face of Mr. White, he vainly essayed to keep up the pretence of indignation. Once fairly on his feet, he nearly collapsed with laughter. He leaned against the wall, and, as his breath came again, he laughed until his sides ached.

Meantime, the detective was crimson with rage and annoyance. His two assistants did not know what to make of the affair.

"What's wrong, Jim?" said one at last. "Isn't this Corbett?"

"No, of course it's not," was his angry growl.

"Then who the —— is it?"

"Oh, ask me another! How on earth could I guess, Mr. Bruce, that you'd come letting yourself in here with a latchkey?"

Claude was still holding his ribs and could not answer, but the policeman who had questioned White caught the name. He recognized it and grinned at his companion.

"What did you want here, anyhow?" snarled the infuriated detective, as he realized that his great coup would be retailed with embellishments through every police station in the metropolis.

"I wanted you to arrest me, W-White," roared Claude, "I said you would and you have."

"Confound it, how could you know I was here?"

"You were sure to wait here for a man who probably will not return for months."

"Was I, indeed? Well, you have yourself to blame if you are hurt. I hope my mates did not treat you too badly?"

"What?" cried the one who had not yet spoken. "He gave me such a punch on the bread-basket that I've only just recovered my speech."

"I think we're about quits," said the other, surveying a torn waistcoat and broken watch-chain.

"I shall be black and blue all over to-morrow," said Bruce, "but if you are satisfied I am. Come, Mr. White, bring your friends and we will open a bottle of wine. We all want it. Corbett won't be here tonight. Just now he is in Wyoming."

"How do you know?"

"By intuition. I am seldom mistaken."

"But why didn't you call out just now when you came in?"

"I hadn't a chance. You were on me like a thousand of bricks. I must confess that if Corbett were in my shoes he would be a doomed man."

White didn't know whether to believe Bruce or not. He was genuinely angry at the incident, but the barrister did not want to convert him into an enemy, and he vaguely felt that a catastrophe was in the moment, and a false move by the police might do irretrievable mischief.

"Well, Inspector," he said, "I must confess that this time you have got the better of me. I did not know you were here. I looked in for the purpose of quietly studying the ground, as it were, and I was never more taken by surprise in my life. Moreover, your plan was a very clever one, in view of the fact that Corbett might return at any moment."

The detective became more amiable at this praise from the famous amateur, for Bruce's achievements were well known to his two colleagues.

Corbett Abroad

"I suppose you wondered what had happened?" he said with a smile.

"I thought my last hour had come. I am only sorry that Corbett himself did not have the experience."

"Do you really believe he is in the States, sir?"

"I am sure of it."

"Then he must have returned there since he wrote that letter."

"That is the only solution of the difficulty."

"Hum. It's a puzzler."

"Why?"

"I would sooner prefer to arrest him on this side. To get him by extradition is a slow affair and probably means a trip across the Atlantic."

Good humor being now restored, the partly quitted the flat and adjourned to a neighboring hotel, where the barrister started White on the full true and particular account of his pursuit and capture of the Winchmore Hill burglars, an exploit which was the pride of the detective's life.

At the end of a bottle of champagne and a cigar they all partied excellent friends, but Bruce did not attempt to revisit Raleigh Mansions that night.

Instead, he partook of a quiet meal at a restaurant and hurried to his chambers to await the advent of the ticket collector.

Punctual to the hour, this new witness arrived and was admitted by Smith in obedience with previous instructions. The man was somewhat awed by the surroundings and the appearance of a servant in livery, but Bruce quickly put him at his ease.

"Come, sit near the fire. Do you drink whiskey and soda? That box contains your favorite cigars. Now, tell me all you know about this business."

"I don't fly as I know anything about it, sir, but by puttin' two and two together it makes four sometimes—not always."

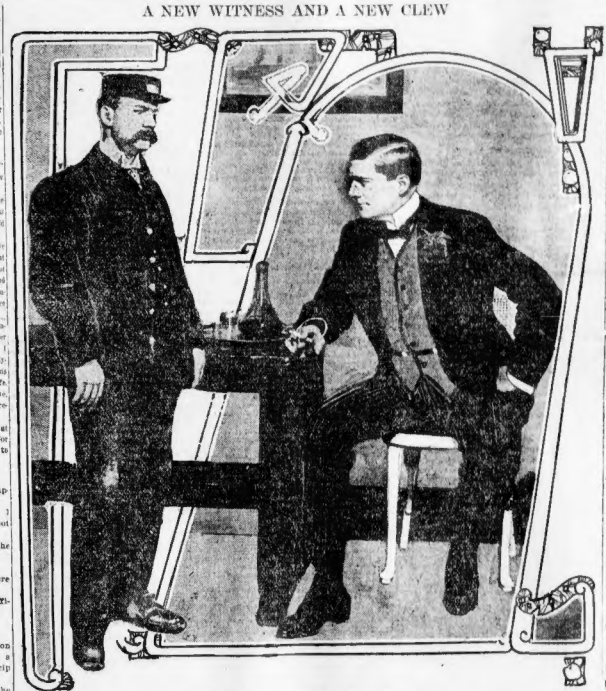
"Quite right. You're a philosopher. Let me hear the two two's. We will see about the addition afterward."

"Well, sir, this yer lydy was a-missin, early November. She tykes a ticket at Victoria Station on the District for Richmond; she gives it up to me at Sloane Square, arsks a newsboy the wy to Raleigh Mansions, for 'e tell me so after you'd bin to see me, an' from what you s'y, 'as bin swallered up ever since."

"The Lord Chief couldn't state the case more simply."

"That's the first two. Now, for the second two, an' you won't forgit as I knew nothink about the lydy bein' dead, for I should 'ave opened my mouth long afore this."

A NEW WITNESS AND A NEW CLEW



Bruce put the witness quickly at ease.

(Posed by William P. Carleton, of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

"Go on. No one can blame you."

"There's an old chap—Foxey, they calls 'im, but I don't know 'is right name—who drives a four-wheeler around Chelsea, an' 'e 'ad tykes a fare from the Square to the City. It might be four o'clock or it might be five, but 'e was on 'is w'y back from Cornhill when a genl, a tall, good-looking gent, a youngish, military chap, 'alls 'im an' says, 'Cabby drive me to Sloane Square. There's 'urry, but tyke care, because it's foggy.' Old Foxey nearly jumped out of 'is skin at this bit of good luck. 'E was pretty full then, for 'e's a regular beer barrel, 'e is, but 'e made up 'is mind to 'ave a fair old skin full that night. Well, Foxey drives 'im all right to the Square. The gent gives 'im five bob and says: 'Wite 'ere for me, cabby. You can drive me 'ome in about an hour's time.' This was at 5:30. Foxey drove up near the stytion, tells me all about it an' stan's me two beers, 'e was that pleased with 'iself. 'E goes to give 'is 'oss the nose-bag, in comes the Richmond train, and out pops the lydy with the Richmond ticket. D'ye follow me?"

"Every word."

"An' you see now 'ow it is I can fix the d'y?"

"Perfectly."

"Well, I sees no more of Foxey. I missed 'im about the Square, as one d'y I axes at the rank, 'Where's Foxey? An' where d'ye think 'e was?'

"I cannot tell.'

"'In quod.'

"'In jail. Why?'

"That's hit. That's number two of the twos. Pardon me, but I'm gettin' a bit mixed. Well it seems that that very night comin' back from Putney as drunk as a lord, old Foxey turns over a barrer. 'E and the coster 'as a fight. The police come, and Foxey dots one bobby in the blinkers and another on the boke. You wouldn't think it was in 'im. 'E must 'ave bin parsylize."

A Work of Art

MRS WHITNEY raised her eyes from her embroidery and glanced out of the window. Then she leaned forward, letting her work drop to her knee, and fixed her gaze on some objects in the street. A moment later she fell back limp in her chair.

"I knew it! I felt it coming!" she moaned. "Oh, Henry, Henry!"

Her cousin Katherine rushed across the room and peered anxiously out of the window, expecting to see nothing less tragical than the lifeless form of the head of the household being borne home on a stretcher. Instead, she saw that person walking briskly down the street, apparently in all his pristine vigor and bearing a package of huge proportions. This package he placed carefully on the step while he fumbled for his latchkey.

"Dear me, Helen, what a start you gave me!" complained Cousin Katherine. "What in the world is the matter?"

Mrs Whitney sat up very straight and spoke grimly in measured accents. "Henry Whitney has been to another auction sale."

His Mania

Cousin Katherine looked somewhat mystified. "Well, really, Helen," she said, "I don't see why it should excite you so. It seems a harmless amusement."

"Harmless!" Mrs. Whitney spoke with bitter emphasis. "Why, Cousin Katherine, I haven't had a peaceful moment since Henry got this auction craze. I never know what he is going to bring home. That atrocious clock in the library and those two mosquitoe vases in Henry's den are some of the fruits of his mania for auctions."

"Oh, I supposed they were wedding presents," put in Cousin Katherine.

"I think he has brought home a second-hand tombstone this time, judging from the size of it," declared Mrs. Whitney. "The auction people simply get hold of him and sell him everything that nobody else will have."

"Couldn't you persuade him"

"Oh, I gave up trying to reason with him long ago. Sh-hh! Here he is."

Whitney entered with the inevitable smile of one who says to himself: "I have a precious secret to divulge—all in my own good time." He crossed the room with a perfunctory greeting to his wife and her guest and deposited his burden affectionately on the corner of a couch. Then he produced a penknife from his pocket and proceeded to cut the strings which bound its paper wrappings.

Layer after layer he removed amid a tense silence. The last paper came off with a flourish, revealing in all its hideousness an imitation bronze figure of a youth clothed in barbaric garments which may have atoned for their scantiness by a superabundance of gilding.

Whitney gazed upon this work of art with rapt admiration. Then he turned to the two women as if to invite their praise.

If at this instant a maid had not announced dinner there might have been a painful domestic scene, for Mrs. Whitney's powers of self-repression were strained to the breaking point.

Moved by a single impulse, hostess and guest hastened to the dining room, leaving the host to follow after one more rapturous glance at his new treasure.

At 12 o'clock that night the house was dark and still when two misty shapes invaded the living room and made their way to the couch in the corner. There was a heavy thud and then the shapes vanished.

"Why, how in the world could it have happened?" exclaimed Mrs. Whitney and Cousin Katherine in concert when the next morning loud outcries from Whitney brought them to the living room, where he had gone to take a look at his new acquisition before starting downtown. Now he stood, pointing tragically.

Upon the floor with its head several feet from its body, by the figure in its attire of bronze paint.

"It is absolutely inexplicable—incredible," said Whitney, circumstantially, stopping to pick up the paint bedecked head.

How It Happened

It was not until the man of the house had departed that the two conspirators dared to look at each other. Then they broke into peals of laughter.

"My conscience didn't hurt me even when I saw poor Henry's face," said the undutiful wife, between outbursts of merriment.

"Conscience! Well, I should say not," exclaimed Cousin Katherine. "It was one of the most deserving acts that I ever performed. Now, you'd better have somebody take those pieces and dispose of them, or he'll bring home some kind of patent glue and put that statute together again."

BRYAN'S HAT IS KICKED AROUND

Governor Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut wired from New Haven:

Replying to your telegram forwarded from Hartford, it does not seem to me that the course you suggest would promote harmony at Baltimore. The Republican party has been visibly declarying itself at Chicago. The storm-centre has been the action of its National Committee in planning for the organization of its convention. I should regard it as unwise to agitate a similar case of difference respecting the action of the Democratic National Committee.

The Democratic party of the United States stands for three things:

1.—Opposition to grants of special privilege to special interests.

2.—Opposition to centralization of power at Washington by encroachments on the rightful sphere of the States.

3.—Economy in public expenditures.

All those who believe that these principles should be steadfastly maintained belong in the Democratic party.

No party can exist or deserve success in the conduct of National affairs that is not large enough to comprehend many who differ widely in their views on minor points.

Governor Foss wired Mr. Hitchcock as follows:

Your telegram received. I believe the Democratic party is on fully committed to progressive principles that the adoption of a progressive platform and nomination of progressive candidates are absolutely essential to tariff reduction, abolition of monopoly and perfecting the agencies of popular government our party has always been and sure to win the coming election.

I hope, therefore, that we shall subordinate all personal issues to these great questions of principle, in order that our party may have the full and important advantage it now possesses. The tariff overwhelms everything else and most of the dominant men in the convention and election. Therefore I sincerely hope to see all Democrats solidly united for downward tariff revision first of all. We will win on that.

Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana wired:

You may be right, but as Judge Parker, as a member of the committee on resolutions from the State of New York at the National Convention at Denver helped to report our platform of 1908, and as he came to Indiana that year to advocate the election of Senator Kern, I do not see how his selection as temporary chairman will result in a reactionary platform in 1912. I am not a delegate to the convention, and as the choice of the party in Indiana for the nomination of President, I deem it inappropriate for me to attempt to dictate to the lawfully constituted party authority who shall or who shall not preside at the convention.

Governor Wilson said that he had received the telegram asking him to join in a movement to prevent the election of Judge Parker and that he would answer it at once, but declined to give any intimation as to the tenor of his reply.

It was his practice, Governor Wilson declared, that any communication from him he left to the recipient to give out, and he would have to adhere to his practice in this instance.

FORESEE PEACE AT BALTIMORE

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 22.—To the "Roosevelt third party boomers" at Chicago, the Democrats already assembled at Baltimore send back the instant and explicit assurances that the Republicans can build no hopes upon the prospects of Democratic division for the support of Theodore Roosevelt in November.

The Baltimore convention, in the opinion of men of all factions now present, will be a Progressive convention, controlled by the Progressive Democrats. It will nominate a Progressive, permanent chairman. It will adopt a Progressive platform, and it will nominate a Progressive Democrat as candidate for President.

There is no thoughtful Democrat now present at Baltimore who expects or who predicts any other outcome than this.

Up to this hour it may be said truly that no Democratic National Committee, or the last twenty years has ever had so bright a prospect for harmony and united action as this.

Everywhere and in all the divided camps assembled, there has been a spirit of good humor and of good fellowship, fully recognizing the presence of rival and competing candidates for the Presidency and fully considered to signify it out fairly and vigorously in the convention, but to fraternize promptly when the verdict of the convention is reached, and to present a solid phalanx to the common enemy in November.

Outside a few casual and perhaps transitory criticisms of one of the candidates, the spirit of fraternity and of good will has prevailed. Into this harmonious and hopeful prospect the echoes of political strife and dissension has come today from the headquarters of discordant Chicago.

It is universally regretted among Mr. Bryan's friends in Baltimore that he should have deemed it necessary to project, at the time he did, and in the way he did, those sharp and discordant telegrams, in language of bitterness and defiance, which make the first serious threat of wrangle among the Democrats.

Surprised at Bryan.

This action is regarded as all the more astonishing from the fact that Mr. Bryan must have sent those dispatches from the press seats at the foot of the platform of the National Republican Convention, and within full view of that vast object lesson of wrangle and bitterness which is destroying the Republican party today. It is freely said here, even among Mr. Bryan's friends, that if he had intended to bring this fierce division into the ranks of the party he ought to have expressed his choice before Judge Parker's selection as temporary chairman, and not afterwards.

Mr. Bryan had declined the place for himself.

The Associated Press carried on Thursday morning to Chicago the announcement that Judge Parker would be selected by the committee of arrangements of the National Committee on Thursday afternoon.

If Mr. Bryan was so strongly antagonistic to this nomination, his friends now declare that he ought to have voiced on Thursday morning those protests and that defiance which he has reserved for Friday morning, twenty-four hours after the nomination was publicly announced.

"I'll Attend to Them Later."

Dispatches from Chicago declare that when this news was announced on Thursday to Mr. Bryan, and his comment requested, he replied:

"I will attend to this one while I am here, and I will attend to the Democratic Convention when I get to Baltimore."

Whether this be true or not, the Democrats at Baltimore are of one mind in thinking that Mr. Bryan's protest should at least have been strenuously presented in advance, as his later sharp and antagonistic telegrams could only result in discord and division.

The gossip of the corridors and the streets at Baltimore also expresses surprise and regret that the friends of Governor Wilson, who had not openly voiced any violent protest against Judge Parker, should have joined so emphatically with Mr. Bryan in this opening note of division.

There is not the slightest disposition or intention now to withdraw Judge Parker, or to avoid the issue of the dictation of Mr. Bryan.

Offered Bryan Place.

As a matter of fact it is stated here that Mr. Bryan himself has been urged by Chairman Mack for two months to allow the use of his name for temporary chairman of the convention. This, Mr. Bryan is said to have declined, and to have requested Senator Ollie James, of Kentucky, to be his proxy for Mr. Bryan's later consideration.

If this be true, it will at least prove that the selection of Judge Parker, which was made by the Committee on Resolutions and ratified by the Committee on Arrangements, was not made by one antagonistic, but friendly to Mr. Bryan.

It is also the sentiment and expression of the pre-convention people that the criticisms of Judge Parker's selection do not in any degree justify the violence of Mr. Bryan's protest, or the spirit of defiance which followed which he has projected upon the Democratic councils.

Judge Parker is not "the most violent of reactionaries," and is not the choice as an ultra-conservative among Democrats. He is generally believed to be a Cleveland and Hill school.

American for Parker.

The NEW AMERICAN, which I am sure no Democrat in the Republic will fail to consider Progressive, has, as I remember, differed very frankly and very radically from Judge Parker on many questions. But it is wholly consistent on here that the NEW YORK AMERICAN in the general interests of Democratic harmony and success, has not found it necessary to protest against Judge Parker's selection.

There is no more Progressive Democrat than Judge Parker. Chief Justice Cullen has been pitched frankly and definitely upon Progressive lines, and if Champ Clark and his friends have not seen fit to make factional objection to Judge Parker, it is wholly inconsistent that Bryan, who had for so long a time the faithful support of Champ Clark, and to the most region or ultra-conservative. This Progressive Democratic convention will find it little different from a speech which might be made in the convention by Champ Clark or Woodrow Wilson.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Copper Shares Selling Higher In Local Market

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 22.—Coppers were higher in the Boston market today, and among those which showed pronounced strength were Calumet & Hecla, U. S. Smelting common, Osceola, Old Colony, Mayflower, Superior Copper and Isle Royal and other issues made fair pronounced gains.

The market was not only active, but there was range to the trading.

Outside the copper list, the most loss was suffered by United Fruit, which sold at one time 3 points lower.

There was heavy buying of American Zinc, which went up on the demand.

More favorable news has been received about Old Colony. President Pay said, "After passing through eleven feet of rock which was fairly mineralized the drift in No. 11 cut an amygdaloid which for sixteen feet carried all kinds of copper from fine to very coarse. This is very rich. The rock resembles hole No. 16 in Maydower."

Big Market Dull and Steady.

The New York market was fractionally lower at the opening, but transactions were small. By tone was steady, however. The convention situation still retards trading and Wall Street is very much preoccupied by the present status of politics.

When the market opened the widest movements were in Reading and the Texas Company. The Texas issue, which gained over three points before reacting yesterday upon manipulation of the Gates crowd, opened at 118, or 3, under Friday's closing. Reading opened at 167¼, a loss of ⅝.

In some of the active stocks only one or two transactions were made in the first fifteen minutes. Steel common opened unchanged, then lost ⅛. Lehigh Valley and Union Pacific were unchanged. Amalgamated Copper was off ⅝, while Smelting had the same amount of gain.

The curb was quiet.

Americans and Canadian Pacific were sluggish in London, where the stock exchange had a very small attendance.

Copper Mining Profits.

It is understood that all sellers are now quoting 17½ cents a pound as their price for electrolytic copper for delivery in this country, having followed the lead set earlier in the week by the United Metals Selling Company. While consumption of copper is said to be on an enormous scale," production is also unprecedented. The May output of the Utah Copper Company shows how mining companies are stirring to take advantage of the present high price of the metal. That company broke its record by producing 20,000,3586 pounds.

Thompson, Towle & Co. have prepared a list of copper companies that they house thinks are likely to increase dividends at the next declaration and the table, given below, also states their estimate of the probable new rate and the margin above it.

	Present Rate.	Probable New Rate.	Margin Above.

The New Clover Leaf Head.

It is understood in Wall Street that D. A. Worthington, stated to succeed Theodore P. Shonts as president of the Chicago & Alton, is the Union Pacific selection, and that it is looked upon as the first step by the latter road in taking a hand in the management of that road like the plan of the recent purchase of Alton securities. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. bankers for Union Pacific, are well acquainted with Mr. Worthington in participating in the Chicago & Alton deal. Mr. Worthington, it was recalled, is a director in several roads and has just resigned as director in the Missouri Pacific railroad, under an Harriman fiat. The Union Pacific holds about $10,000,000 of Chicago & Alton preferred stock, and interest associated with it recently bought $1,500,000 bonds of the latter road's new bonds. When Mr. Shonts resigned as Chicago & Alton president it was announced that he would give all his attention to New York traction interests. He is president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

Financial News in Brief.

Field & Fay announce that their market letter contains the latest development regarding Ohio Copper. This company is to be reorganized and the new one will have a capital of $80,000,000, divided into 1,600,000 shares of $50 each. The directors of the new company will be W. O. Allison, John C. Shaffer, Samuel M. Felton, Jr., F. Augustus Heinze and Stanley Goldfarb.

It is said that Pittsburgh steel mills are so far behind in deliveries as seven weeks, and that eastern plants are about one month in the rear. Seventy-eight new locomotives have been ordered of the Pressed Steel Car Company for the New York, Westchester & Boston branch of the New Haven system.

It is said that Wabash reorganization plans include the road with not only enough money to pay off its floating capital charge, but to give it ample working capital. It costs more in the end to let a property run down than to maintain it in first-class condition. This is one lesson taught by many receiverships.

It is the intention, said Newman Erb, one of the directors, to pay off the entire $4,000,000 of 6 per cent. collateral trust bonds, and the arrangements for the latter are in the hands of counsel. It is understood that the Pittsburgh, Lake Erie and Trust Company opposes the sale of receivers' certificates because it does not want those securities placed before the bonds.

Officials of the Rock Island road affirm that July dividend and interest disbursement will total $2,584,611.00, on which $1,720,000 will go to the preferred and $864,972.00 to stockholders.

The Rock Island system has assets at $2,301,000,000.

Jacob H. Hooker, who died recently, has been succeeded as head of the Fall River Iron Works and the American Printing Company by Henry B. Borden, and the stockholders of the two companies have also elected Howard S. Borden vice-president and treasurer, and Nathan Durfee assistant treasurer. The product of the former mills will continue to be sold in the commission house of M. C. D. Borden & Sons.

About the first of next month there will be issued, it is said, a new prospectus of the Steel Corporation, showing the bonds and the assets of the latter on the demand of the basis for higher prices. The new classified list will cost them $25,000,000 more a year for operating. If the new wage scale is granted, it is expected that the advance on the demands of the bonuslite employees will begin about July 1.

What is supposed to be a formidable rival to the Steel Corporation is the Allegheny Steel Company, with authority to capitalize at $50,000,000. It will commence with half its preferred stock. It will be known as the Weir Baking Company. The National Biscuit Company, as the "Trust" is properly known, has a capital of $52,000,000 and has been one of the best managed industrial companies in the world.

An unsuccessful attempt to reorganize the Alabama Consolidated Coal & Iron Company has resulted in the appointment of Harley Harris, of Birmingham, Ala., as receiver. The Alabama Consolidated Coal & Iron Company is a holding company.

Lehigh Valley net earnings for the eleven months ending May 31st were $8,380,000, a corresponding decrease of $2,340,700, and it is figured that in order to earn its 8 per cent. dividend the last one of the road will have to surpass that of the same month in 1911. Suspension of mining in the spring greatly reduced Lehigh Valley receipts, but the Lehigh Coal Selling Company has also been affected, the latter company to its holdings, having nearly 11,000,000 tons of coal on hand. The subject of increasing the number of shares and of issuing bonds will be taken up at the annual meeting, when the proposition to increase the capital stock from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 will be considered. Some bonds will be issued to finance the deal.

WOMAN IN FAINT AS HOME AT WEST ROXBURY BURNS

One woman fainted from fright at a fire which practically destroyed a two-and-a-half wooden dwelling house at No. 266 Spring street, West Roxbury, early today, causing a loss of $1,000.

The building is owned by Morris Alpert, and was occupied by his wife and Morris Silverstein, a young lodger. Silverstein, who was sleeping on the second floor, was awakened by the smoke. He rushed upstairs and awoke Mrs. Alpert. Both escaped to the street uninjured, but Mrs. Alpert, who is about fifty years old, fainted from fright.

The cause of the fire is unknown. It was discovered by Fred Zyner, living nearby. Mr. Alpert, the owner of the house, was away on business.

FORMER GOVERNOR HENRY B. CLEAVES OF MAINE IS DEAD

PORTLAND, Me., June 22.—Henry B. Cleaves, Republican Governor of Maine from 1893 to 1897, died here today, after a long illness.

Ex-Governor Cleaves was born at Bridgton, February 6, 1840, and was educated at Bridgton Academy and Bowdoin College. He is receiving an honorary degree of M. A. from the latter institution. He had a distinguished record as a soldier in the Civil War.

DEATHS

CHARLES E. MORRISON, formerly active in the commission business in Boston, will be buried at Mt. Auburn tomorrow. He was eighty years of age and was vice-president of the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank and had been a director and vice-president of the Concord & Montreal Railroad.

ESTHER MARSHALL BLAIR is dead at her home, No. 49 Gerhan avenue, Brookline, aged forty-nine.

CHARLES EMERSON HOAR, who died June 7 in Ventura, Cal., will be buried on Monday in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Concord.

MRS. AMELIA E. CAMPBELL, widow of James Campbell, is dead at No. 72 Pearson avenue, Somerville, aged 70.

CLIP COUPONS, VISIT REVERE

Have you ever seen an English lord? No!

Well, just drop into Pattee's Original Dining Girls' Show any day at Revere Beach. Of course he's only a make-believe chimney of royal lineage—the smoke kind, but he's genuinely English and "is name is "Lord Helpus."

He looks as if somebody ought to help him quick when he slips into the tank, checked trousers, fresh cut, glove, silk hat, monocle, cigar and all, but when he comes to the surface in a bathing suit and proceeds to imitate a seal, spectators lose their anxiety and sympathy.

Yet this is only one of the many features at the aquatic show now on which the free coupons in Sunday's AMERICAN admit its readers, and there are four other amusement parks and the free coupon list this week.

Take in the motion picture and vaudeville shows at the Revere Theatre, and the Theatre Comique; have a ride on the Giant Thrill, and don't overlook the "aeroplane Flight."

Cultivate the coupon clipping habit as soon as you buy your Sunday AMERICAN.

$12,500 VERDICT FOR RAILROAD INJURIES

Edrie R. Taylor, a salesman, living in Everett, was awarded $12,500 damages by a jury in Judge Sanderson & Mahar railroad 76 the Superior Court for injuries when a train was derailed at Roxbury, Mo., on February 3, 1909. The jury was out all night. Mr. Taylor was brought into court on a wheel chair. He sued for $50,000.

Will the Bull Moose Party Soon Be Born?

And what will it do to the old Republican machine that has swindled the Republican voters.
That question seems to be all that is left of this convention.

CHICAGO, June 22.—The song of this convention runs now as follows, according to Montague, the poet:

Why, let the stricken Moose go weep;
The Taft, ungalled, play.
For some must work while some must weep,
So runs the world away.

Taft has, safe and sound, 546 votes, six more than he needs, and ENOUGH.

The plan is to nominate as soon as the preliminary fussing and roll-calling on contested seats end. Root, like the kind man who cut off his dog's tail half an inch at a time because he hadn't the heart to cut off the whole thing at once, is proceeding slowly and cautiously. In appearance he has been more than fair to the Roosevelt side and in important matters he has not let Roosevelt gain one single point.

The painful surgical operation ought to come to an end today. There is little chance that any change will come up, or that the machine will try to wipe out the Roosevelt bitterness by taking a man other than Taft.

The men that ought to know and that usually tell the truth to reporters declare that it is to be Taft absolutely, and no change of any kind.

The Roosevelt men consider themselves beaten and have no hope, although they are fighting to the end. Heney and Johnson of California fought gallantly Friday and almost aroused in the dull crowds some indignation at the control of ninety millions of people by a handful of politicians.

But the time for indignation and effective protest, so far as this gathering goes, seems to have passed. Roosevelt let the one chance slip when he came within a few blocks of convention hall and stayed OUT of the hall.

Now the public talks of the "Bull Moose Party" that is expected to result from the deliberate and perfectly open buffooning of the public.

Roosevelt has said positively that HE would head a third party—a second REPUBLICAN party, rather. The interest in this convention has died out and interest centers now in the coming Bull Moose Party. If Roosevelt does not change his mind, and gives those that have been swindled here a chance to vote for him and against the swindlers, we are to have an interesting political year—especially in view of events looming up at Baltimore.

The wise and effective corporation Republicans here say openly that the corporations will do with the Democratic machine at Baltimore what they have done with the Republican machine here, and offer to Mr. Trust Moloch as pure and innocuous, safe, sane and servile a trust candidate as Moloch's hardened old heart could desire.

If Democratic Baltimore should vie with Republican Chicago in peace offerings to the trusts and the people should see two corporation dromios asking for votes on two sides of the political fence this Fall—that Bull Moose Party now hatching under Roosevelt's irritated skull ought to be quite important.

Great Scope of the Panama-Pacific Exposition

Plans have just been made public for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. They show that the Fair, to be held from February 20 to December, 1915, will be the greatest in the world's history.

The original fund was $17,500,000, then $4,000,000 was obtained in a two-hour meeting of San Francisco business men, and later this was increased to $7,500,000; still later, the city and the county issued $10,000,000 worth of bonds which were immediately subscribed.

Twenty-four States have already granted appropriations, and there will be thirteen buildings for the display of exhibits in the arts and industries.

It is fitting that the Exposition should be the greatest ever attempted, since it celebrates the opening of the Panama Canal. The cordial reception given to the Fair Commissioners abroad insures splendid co-operation from all over the world.

Every American will have occasion to be proud of the work done by San Francisco.

Swat That Fly

By PERCY SHAW

NOW Summer's here,
Cast up your eye
And strike to death
The roaming fly;
Where'er you find
Him spare him not,
But join the clans
That swat, swat, swat.

If twenty times
As big, he'd be
Wiped out as man's
Worst enemy.
Because he's small,
We let him go
To fill our graves
Before we know.

A million germs
He freely brings
As on our food he
Crawls and sings;
'Tis time we learned
Our foolish lot
And saved our lives
With swat, swat, swat.

Pray say no more
Of man's advance
Until he leaves
Much less to chance.
No longer with
False ego sigh,
But get you up
And swat that fly.

Desperate Desmond Taft

Would anyone suspect Rosamond Nomination of flirting? Look and learn.

1—DAVY CROCKETT. Claude Roosevelt has barred the door. He will die sooner than allow Desperate Desmond Taft to escape with Claude's sweetheart, Rosamond Nomination. He stands for the people, y' know.

2—AYE, AYE, SIR. Claude Roosevelt sends Lieutenant Hadley on a mission to force his way into the presence of Desperate Taft and demand the release of the kidnaped Rosamond. "Aye, aye, sir," responds Lieutenant Hadley. "I'm a fighter myself."

3—CUPID'S DARTS. Bravely does Lieutenant Hadley demean himself before Desperate Taft, Sly Fox Root and Rosamond Nomination. And Rosamond's soft eyes rest admiringly upon the brave young feller. Ah, woman—fickle, fickle woman—dost forget Hero Claude so soon?

4—THE EAVESDROPPER. Through the door come words in honeyed tones: "I could learn to love you, Rosamond." Can the fighting lieutenant thus speak in cooing turtledove? Claude Roosevelt can hardly believe his ears. What steps will he take now? Frankly, we haven't the faintest idea, but time will tell.

Er—— Er—— Er——

Did You Know That More People Read This Page Every Day Than Any Other Page Printed in New England?

And This Is Not a Circulation Advertisement Either—Just a Casual Explanation of Why It Is That Each Saturday in This Same Position the Sunday Editor Is Privileged to Mention Some of the Interesting Things Which Have Been Prepared for the Readers of Sunday's AMERICAN.

WHEN you consider that the Sunday AMERICAN is read by more New England people than any other newspaper, the problem of securing the news stories, the special articles, the pictures, the comic illustrations and all that goes to make a modern Sunday newspaper, assumes mighty proportions.

To satisfy the demands of such a large number of readers a great variety of subjects must be considered, a great variety of stories must be provided, and only those of the most absorbing interest chosen from the hundreds of suggestions and ideas offered.

After a Sunday editor has worked all the week gathering from countless sources the various features which go to make up a great metropolitan Sunday newspaper, it is a privilege to be able to announce on this, the most read page printed in New England, some of the big stories, news features, special articles, comic pictures and contests which will appear in the Sunday edition.

Below are mentioned some of the good things which you will find in tomorrow's edition.

Here's a query to the bright girl of New England—Are you looking for a husband? The horrid census man says you are and that there are more of you than should be. A story of husbands who are yet to be—and some of them sooner than they think—will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It will be illustrated. Perhaps a few of the eligibles whose pictures are there, will wish they were not there. But they deserve to be in the public pillory and every girl in Boston will endorse the verdict.

* * *

Ten thousand people have packed the big Coliseum at Chicago every day since last Monday. Probably as many will get in, or try to get in, to the hall of the coming convention in Baltimore.

Yet, after all, 10,000 people is but a very small fraction of the American people. Millions hungered for news from Chicago as millions will hunger for news from Baltimore.

And to meet the demand this newspaper assigned to both conventions men who know every nook and cranny of the political citadels of both parties. In the past week, Hrisbaan, Pollock, Donoghue, McQuaid, Justin McGrath, Elbert Hubbard, Montague and Bruno Lessing have been every moment, night and day, on the firing line at Chicago.

Their work in that scene of conflict accomplished, these men will head straight for Baltimore, where they will chronicle other great scenes of political history-making.

Tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN will be literally brimful, loaded to the guards with political news, gossip and forecast. Every star sign in the political firmament will be read by expert astrologers for guides as to events that are coming. For comfort, ease, copious information and general personal satisfaction, in this hour of national crisis, a copy of the Sunday AMERICAN—costing just one nickel—will put its possessor in a far more comfortable and satisfactory position than that of any delegate in the Convention City, sleeping six beds to a room or broiling in the sun.

Moral—Order your Sunday AMERICAN TODAY and have your laugh on the suffering delegate tomorrow.

Down in the depths of Harvard brain culture lie hidden some artists in embryo who are already showing signs that when they break through their shells, such cartoonists as T. E. Powers and F. Opper may as well sing the swan song and betake to the woods. Who are those embryonic geniuses at Harvard? The Sunday AMERICAN will tell you tomorrow. Order a copy from your newsdealer today.
